PRESIDENT KIDERA NOTES
FIVE-YEAR PLAN PROGRESS

In a December statement, President Kidera noted that "following nearly two years of study and deliberation, the Master Plan committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Charles E. Ford, "has distributed its report to trustees, members of the University Senate and faculty.

President Kidera said, "While the report recommends that Sacred Heart University recommit itself to its original purpose of being an undergraduate Catholic college, with (continued on page 8)

GIFTS, BALANCED BUDGET,
FOCUS SHU FINANCE EFFORTS

A University Gift Report showed about $293,000 in grants and gifts for 1973-74. It was also indicated that a 1974-75 Budget adopted by the Trustees should be a balanced one.

Through a combination of strengthened budgetary controls, anticipated gift and tuition income, and other positive measures, the 1974-75 fiscal year budget represents a balanced one and was approved June 18, 1974 by the Trustees. President Kidera called 1974-75 a year of "High Hopes and Expectations" and noted any deficit should be swiftly retired with the help of enrollment growth, gift increases, tuition adjustments and continuing financial control of institutional budgets to guard against future inflationary pressures while providing a quality academic program.

The University, on January 1, 1975, increased tuition $75 for full-time study for the Spring, 1975 semester, and corresponding increases of $5 per credit hour in various evening, day and Summer part-time courses.

Cross Registration Program
Cited as Cooperative Effort
Among Public-Private Sectors

President Kidera cited the emphasis on cross-registration activities between public and private higher education institutions in Fairfield county as evidence of the desire to work cooperatively on higher educational problems.

Through the HECUS (Higher Education Center of Urban Studies) organization, of which Mr. Kidera is also president, students from Fairfield County public institutions can select courses at private ones which their own college may not have and through a state grant arrangement (P.A. 140) be able to select such courses at state rate cost with the private colleges involved being subsidized under the grant.

Sacred Heart is participating in the HECUS cross-registration program and enrolled 32 students from public institutions during the combined past spring, summer and fall semesters. (continued on page 4)

SHU Launches Active Admissions Recruiting Efforts

The admissions office, staffed by director William Dean and associate director Spiros Antoniadis, this fall carried out a busy schedule of high school and college night visits, in addition to hosting high school counselors and student visits to the campus this fall.

FRIEND, a new alumni-led program to assist prospective students complete application and obtain admission is another of the efforts helpful to the admissions officers. FRIEND, is scheduled to go into action this month and will use a group of some 15 alumni living in different geographic areas to contact prospective students. The FRIENDS will help with admissions procedures and be constantly up-dated on the university both by the project chairman Cosmo Civale and by Mr. Dean. Civale is a 1970 graduate from Waterbury who now teaches at Seymour high school.

The first SHU College Awareness Day in December involved inter-
Sharing a memory of the late Dr. William H. Conley, founding president of Sacred Heart University, before the dedication of a memorial collection of books, December 8, in his name in the University library are Richard A. Matzek, librarian; Mrs. Conley; and the Most Rev. Walter W. Curtis, Bishop of Bridgeport. The official portrait of Dr. Conley, painted by former faculty member Thomas Guldone, is at left.

Campus interest in the arts and humanities was never more prevalent than that evidenced by the above audience which filled the University library lecture hall to hear internationally recognized editor and writer, Louis Untermeyer (standing) review the works of the late poet, Robert Frost in a November Convocation.

Architects of success in part-time educational development include the above three planners who have contributed to the University's part-time growth in that field. They are Arthur J. Brissette, seated, assistant dean and director of continuing education and (standing) Mrs. Carol Ney, associate director, and Charles W. Harper, business department chairman.

TWO SHU ALUMNI IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY

In the October, 1974 issue of HAPPENINGS, it was noted that John R. Quinn of Fairfield and Thom Serrani of Stamford were candidates for the General Assembly from the 132nd and 144th Districts respectively. The University was pleased to learn that both men won and that Representative Quinn and Representative Serrani have now become members of the General Assembly. Noting their accomplishment, President Kidera said "we are honored to have alumni of such a young University in positions of leadership responsibility to the citizens of our state." It is symbolic of much of the progress our alumni are making and we are additionally pleased to report that both men are involved on the University Contact List to help further the successful passage of Legislation of value to the independent colleges of Connecticut.

CELEBRITIES SPARK SUCCESSFUL CONVOCATION AND OTHER EVENTS

Governor Ella Grasso, former U.S. Representative Robert Steele, actress Viveca Lindfors, author and editor Louis Untermeyer and the Rev. Eugene Carson Blake were among celebrities speaking at Sacred Heart this fall.

Governor Grasso and her then Gubernatorial opponent, Mr. Steele, were participants at separate convocations outlining the issues of the 1974 Fall Campaign in Connecticut.

Miss Lindfors donned a variety of capes, shawls and wigs to portray 36 real and fictional women for a large audience attending her convocation "I Am a Woman." Mr. Untermeyer, a personal friend of the late poet Robert Frost and one of the first to collect his works in anthology form, discussed "Acquaintance with Frost" before another well-attended convocation.

The Rev. Dr. Blake, a former president of the World Council of Churches, who is now executive director of Bread for the World, discussed world hunger.

Among other speakers this fall have been Dr. Peter Lengyel of Yale, who delivered the Fourth Annual Voynick Memorial Lecture, poet Michael Culross, and Lanza del Vasto, Christian pacifist and author.
THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

by Robert A. Kidera
President, Sacred Heart University

The recent announcement that Sacred Heart University would increase its tuition rate by $75 for the second semester, contained one fact that deserves repeating. The vote by the Trustees for the increase was made at the recommendation of a committee composed of students, faculty and administrators.

At most colleges, an increase in tuition is greeted by protests or criticism by students. At Sacred Heart the student leaders had joined faculty and administrators in a study of the University's financial needs and the constant pressures of inflation and rising energy costs — and all concluded that an increase was not only justified but highly desirable.

We believe this tells something special about SHU students and the spirit of community and cooperation which is found on the SHU campus.

In addition to the recommendation to increase tuition, students and staff have embarked upon an effort to generate additional income and gift support for several auxiliary enterprises or non-academic activities. For instance, the student staff of WSHU-FM has conducted an "on-the-air" solicitation of its listeners and is seeking sponsor grants for several of its broadcasts. Similarly, the Drama Department has accepted invitations for outside "Cabarets" which produce revenue for the University — and next Spring the students will help man the telephones during the Phonathon for parents and alumni.

From experience, we know that voluntary gift support for the University will be generated more easily if potential donors see that the students themselves are so committed and so appreciative of their experience at SHU, that they themselves are involved in its fund-raising activities.

Personally, I can think of no better appeal to potential donors than this student involvement. We have much to be grateful for — in our students — and for the reception and support that donors have in turn given to them.

VARSITY MEN’S BASKETBALL TEAM EXCELS

The Sacred Heart University Men's Varsity Basketball Team, based on its early December performance appeared to be a near certainty for a post-season NCAA Tournament bid with a 6-1 record which included wins over New Haven (71-62), Pace 79-74), St. Anselm (85-78), AIC (91-88), Marist (85-83), Kean State (89-72) and a loss to C. W. Post (79-72).

With no graduation losses last season, the cagers boasted balance and scoring punch in their initial contests from players such as Carl Winfree, freshman Hector Olivencia and Ed Irwin to cut through early opponents like a hot knife through butter. They appeared to be off and running to one of their most outstanding seasons in what has become a continuing annual pattern of success attributable to the coaching genius of J. Donald Feeley.

Girls Squad Formed

A University’s Girls’ Basketball varsity squad, which started this year under the guidance of former Kaybestos Brakette star Mickey Stratton, has organized a schedule of play for this month which includes Fairfield University, the University of Bridgeport, and Connecticut College. Lorie Jones and Regina Wright were promising players in practice sessions.

Coach Peter DiOrio indicated a very successful Fall Baseball season took place with a largely Freshman team compiling a 6-6 record, including two victories over arch-rival Fairfield University. Catcher Joe Rietano stood out with a .361 batting average.

CABARET MAINTAINS HECTIC PACE DURING FALL SEASON

In addition to entertaining capacity weekend schedules on campus, Claude McNeal's Cabaret players have been maintaining a hectic special schedule entertaining area church, parent, civic and guidance counselor groups.

On October 24, they entertained in Hartford at a Republican Party Dinner which included national, state and area notables. On December 7 they performed "Cabaret at the Tower," a benefit to aid Bridgeport's proposed Center for the Arts at the tower level of the State National Bank in downtown Bridgeport and Bridgeport's Mayor Nicholas Panuzio acted as host as he had at the October 24 Hartford meeting.

The group also presented Decades November 6 at the New York Hilton.

The Golden Goose Ensemble, SHU children’s theatre troupe, has been contracted to perform throughout the Fairfield school system and has performed before several other groups. Directed by Pat Lombard, the ensemble presented “The Adventures of Raggedy Ann, Andy and their Doll Friends” in December and “Fairy Tales; Fact and Fiction” the preceding month. The ensemble plans to present “The New Adventures of Winnie-the-Pooh” in February or early March.

MULTI-MEDIA ACCOUNTING PROGRAM DEVELOPED

Through a gift of Everett Delaney, partner in the J. William Hope Accounting Firm, of Bridgeport, and father of Trustee Robert D. Delaney, a multi-media accounting program has been made possible. It will include film strips and cassettes of accounting information which are played through a self-help projector for individual instruction. The projector will be located in one of the lower level rooms of the library.

The accounting program will be used throughout the year to enable students to review accounting information in 30 segments, allowing students to reinforce at their own speed information learned in class.

In summing up these new and continuing activities, Mr. Dean said, "Probably the best recruiters for our university are the students themselves, past and present. They tell it like it is and they relate well to other students too."

Inquiries by interested students at public colleges in the County should be made by them to the liaison officer at the respective public institution involved.

Campus Reports

Orientation sessions were held this fall for part-time as well as full-time students with emphasis on the one-to-one meeting between old and new students. The Newcomers program continued efforts to integrate students into the university.

The alumni council met in October for their first annual meeting. James D. Sabo, a 1969 graduate, is president.

Trustee Dr. Mercedes de Arango, who is also professor emeritus at Manhattanville college, addressed students on "Our Spanish Heritage," highlighting Spanish week.

Forty high school guidance counselors from several schools visited the university and enjoyed a panel of students discuss "Life at SHU."

"Taste of College" was offered in October and November with introductory mini courses taught in the areas of social work, urban studies, psychology and English.

Denise DiVita, Stratford junior, and John Jay Sheehan, Bridgeport, were elected queen and king of Ivy Weekend.

The management center sponsored seminars on compensation, affirmative action, and wages and salaries this fall. Harold "Hal" Wegman is center director.

Four students in Dr. Ralph Corrigan's writing classes have published articles in regional or national magazines this fall.

Dr. Grace Farrell Lee, assistant professor of English, won a grant for post-doctoral studies from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and is preparing a paper on 10th and 20th century fiction as a result of her B.S. degree in social sciences from Wilberforce University (Ohio) and her M.A. degree in counseling and family relations from the University of Connecticut.

An exhibition of 27 models of the inventions of Leonardo da Vinci, on loan from IBM Corporation, are being exhibited in the university library from January 8 through February 1.

Dr. Charles E. Ford, academic vice president and dean, was named to the Faculty of Consulting Examiners for the Connecticut Board for State Academic Awards.

A special exhibit of 49 pieces of the work of Vermont artist Caroline Hooke was displayed.

Several musical events, including chamber orchestra and choral concerts, a "Day for Dancing," and Thomas Merton Memorial celebration freedom songs performed by the chamber singers, took place this fall.

HUMANITARIAN CONCERNS

FEATURE FALL SCENE

Activities focusing on humanitarian concerns highlighted the fall scene at SHU.

At least 30,000 pounds of goods were reported in early December for the University's Fifth Annual Appalachia drive spearheaded by Sigma Tau Omega fraternity for needy people in Lewis County, Kentucky.

The Appalachia activities and earlier ones concerned with Honduran relief which involved the SHU Campus Ministry and interested students were covered by Channel 8 Television in New Haven. Alleviating world hunger has been a continuing theme at the University this fall.

The Ministry also has been active in the counseling, planning and implementation of programs such as table talk discussion, Tuesday night films and the Thomas Merton Memorial Film celebration. Both the Rev. John B. Giuliani, chaplain, and Sister Kathleen P. Deignan, C.N.D., associate chaplain, have been involved in various community humanitarian programs working with the Diocese of Bridgeport Ministry of Social Concerns. Sister Deignan also has composed words and music to songs for worship for liturgies at the University.

A news article in the local press concerning fraternities and sororities at SHU and the University of Bridgeport further featured the activities of SHU Greek letter organizations in humanitarian activities and John J. "Chubby" Katona, a University staff member, was also featured for his portrayal of Santa Claus to families, church groups, and convalescent home residents during the Yuletide season.

ARTS GRANT GIVEN FOR BICENTENNIAL

President Kidera recently acknowledged a $2,500 Grant from the Connecticut Commission on the Arts to support a series of special visual art exhibits which will be part of the SHU 1974-75 Bicentennial Arts Program. The Rev. William J. Fletcher, director of cultural events, was involved with the grant acquisition and will administer its use in the program.
