Taking the Nation’s Pulse...
Sacred Heart University Polling Institute
Dear Friends,

Several years ago, I remember reading a story about a beloved professor who had been teaching for generations in the same college. A newspaper reporter asked him why he had stayed so long. His answer was immediate and unhesitating: “I love school,” he replied simply, “and this is my way of staying in school forever.”

I suppose, that is a big part of the answer as to why we are all here. We love scholarship and scholars. We love the life of the mind and the hope it offers us that a better world is possible. We love assisting young learners in their quest for truth. In short, we love school.

This year, Sacred Heart University will celebrate its 40th anniversary. While four decades is a long time for many purposes, in academic circles, it is the first blush of youth. However, our University is buttressed by a Catholic intellectual tradition that stretches back many hundreds of years and we are leaders in the process of defining and enhancing that tradition for the generations yet to come. I invite our many friends and supporters to help us plan and celebrate this milestone and to help us build on our sturdy foundations for the next 40 years.

The assaults of the present age are never far from our minds, and we began this academic year weighed down with thoughts of the wounds first opened just a year before. Any temptation to fatalism or despair was quickly dispelled by our amazing University community, though, as we marked the opening of the 2002-2003 academic year and remembered the needs of our nation in prayer. On September 11th, virtually the entire student body and staff — some 2,500 strong — jammed the Pitt Center for our opening Liturgy of Remembrance and Reconciliation. That evening, some 800 members of our community gathered for a candlelight vigil in the Quadrangle. Once again, we know why we are here.

May 2003 continue to bring healing and growth to each of us. Thank you for your continuing support of our students and our redoubled efforts on their behalf.

With every best wish, I am

Sincerely,

Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D.

Sacred Heart University • Winter 2003
Harry Truman used to ask how far Moses would have gotten if he had taken a poll in Egypt. And you know how difficult it is just to get the family to agree on pizza toppings. Town meeting democracy seems farther and farther away from our experience, and yet all of us share the urge to offer our two cents’ worth, to contribute to the design of the quilt—in short, to have our say.

Sacred Heart University is now an active participant in this process of laying an ear to the ground and asking the American people what they value and hope for. Since late 2001, the University has been home to the Center for Research and Public Policy, and has already conducted four broad surveys through the new Sacred Heart University Polling Institute. About four times a year, the institute will canvas U.S. citizens on a huge number of potential topics. Participants may come from the immediate vicinity, or just as likely, from across the country.

Led by Jerry C. Lindsley for more than 20 years, the Center for Research and Public Policy moved to the University’s Oakview Center in November 2001, after a successful tenure in New Haven. As Jerry tells it, his old friend Fred Biebel first introduced him to the University President, Dr. Anthony J. Cernera, five years ago. While Dr. Cernera recognized the value to the University and its students of aligning with a seasoned polling institute, there was literally no room for the Center to relocate, and the move waited for an opening on campus and a timely expiration of the New Haven lease.

“We are just delighted to be here,” says Mr. Lindsley, “and our relationship with students and professors here will be increasingly valuable, we expect, for all of us.” The Center anticipates adding students to its core of more than 100 telephone poll-takers, and its senior staff plans to work closely with University professors and administrators to incorporate the polling process and its outcomes into the curriculum.

The Sacred Heart University Polling Institute will bring the University national prominence on an increasingly visible and important playing field. Virtually every evening, the newscasts include the latest results from some representative survey, and the institute’s first national poll, conducted in April, was no exception. Initially, the spring poll was intended to focus on attitudes of American Catholics. But the accelerating tensions in the Middle East made an exploration of this topic even more timely, especially after a member of the Saudi Royal Family indicated that withholding oil from the West was a potential “stick” to be used in favor of the Palestinian cause.

The results were revealing. For example, “The Middle East: Religion, Energy and the Media” found that 67 percent of all Americans believe the European nations are not doing enough to bring about peace in the Middle East, and nearly two-thirds believe that PLO Chairman Yassar Arafat should be expelled. Widespread coverage in the electronic and print media followed the survey, a phenomenon that will surely escalate as the Polling Institute grows in recognition and, thus, credibility.

The Center for Research and Public Policy chiefly conducts polls on three central tracks: what it calls “direct democracy” issues, corporate research and public policy. The University’s Polling Institute, however, starts with a bias toward issues that involve ethical behavior. As an arm of a major Catholic education center, it intends to pursue areas that other research firms might overlook and that other polling operations might not find compelling.

The April poll was conducted according to a fairly standard methodology: More than a thousand households across the nation were contacted by telephone from Trumbull, Connecticut. In fact, the number of attempted contacts was closer to 4,000 since some people work a later shift, and many busy families are simply out between five and nine in the evening.
Jerry Lindsley acknowledges that many people find it difficult to imagine that a representative survey actually represents the larger community. “When people say, ‘No one ever called my house and asked me my opinion,’ I have to admit that makes sense to me. There are 275 million people in America; it’s not likely we’re going to talk directly to you. But a doctor doesn’t need to take out all your blood to conduct a decent test.

“We are very conscious of reaching a sample that is truly representative of the population at large. In some Connecticut communities, for example, as many as a third of all households have unlisted telephone numbers, and in parts of Nevada, at the extreme, that percentage more than doubles. To compensate for this, we work to arrange interviews with all households, not simply those with listed phone numbers. And as many as one in five of our canvassers speaks Spanish, with other languages represented on our staff as well.”

The Center for Research and Public Policy works with clients all over the country and speaks each year with tens of thousands of residents in every state of the nation. Still, when it releases the data from a national poll, it asserts that the results are as accurate for a thousand respondents as for 100 million, give or take three percent. The outcomes are increasingly valuable for public policy decisions, and the process has the capacity to put Sacred Heart University on the national map in a unique and positive way.

The Sacred Heart University Polling Institute welcomes ideas from members of the larger community, especially alumni and friends of the University. The institute is happy to receive suggestions and guidance from all quarters. You can contact Jerry Lindsley at 203/374-5059 or at www.crpp.com.

University Grads Rate Their Alma Mater

‘Magna Cum Laude’

The test results have been tallied, and the students did great. As well they should: each of them had been studying the issues for years. The subject at hand was Sacred Heart University and their own experience and evaluation of their alma mater.

Just over 400 alumni participated in an ambitious summer 2002 survey to gauge their attitudes regarding Sacred Heart University. The telephone poll was conducted by the Center for Research and Public Policy, which has offices at the University’s Oakview Center in Trumbull. The results are considered accurate, plus or minus five percentage points. According to the Center’s director, Jerry Lindsley, that means that if the same survey were to be conducted on every one of the University’s more than 20,000 alumni, the results could be expected to stay the same 95 percent of the time.

Mr. Lindsley cautioned that the poll, like any similar testing device, can only be considered a snapshot in time. As alumni become closer to their alma mater or drift further away, as their family or business obligations grow or ease, even as their physical location changes, then their knowledge of the University and their attitude toward it will change. “Our research,” he explained, “was designed to obtain feedback from Sacred Heart University alumni on areas such as awareness, perceptions, communication, alumni participation, alumni activities and alumni giving.”

Rob Cottle, director of the University’s Office of Alumni Relations, which sponsored the poll, noted that the findings will be invaluable. “They will allow us to plan programs of outreach and communication with our graduates based on solid knowledge and a much clearer understanding of their needs. As an alumnus [a member of the Class of 1990] the findings were very gratifying.”

The results indicated a broad degree of satisfaction with the Sacred Heart University experience and the value of the grads’ academic preparation. A whopping 94.8 percent of alumni agreed with this statement: “I have great pride in my Sacred Heart degree,” and better than nine out of 10 alums “would eagerly refer a prospective student.” Eighty-five percent of the respondents believe that the University “has been moving in the right direction,” and an equal ratio believe their degree is helping them attain their goals. If politicians were able to garner such margins, they would think they had died and gone to heaven.

Discovery Dinner Sets a Record:
$225,000 for Students in Need

The 2002 13th annual Discovery Awards and Scholarship Dinner realized more than $225,000, to be used exclusively to benefit needy students. This represents an increase of more than 50 percent over last year's totals.

Over 360 friends of the University gathered in the William H. Pitt Health and Recreation Center on Saturday, April 20, for the celebration. Those honored included Mr. and Mrs. Al Barber of New Canaan; Mr. Dean C. Borgman, President of Sikorsky Aircraft; Father Michael Jude Fay of Darien; Ed, Bill and Jack Mitchell of Westport; and Mr. and Mrs. William Roberti '69, '97 of Southport. Among the special guests were Congressman and Mrs. Christopher Shays, Connecticut Attorney General Richard Blumenthal, and Mary Travers, of Peter, Paul & Mary fame, as well as the Chairman of the University's Board of Trustees, Bishop William E. Lori of Bridgeport.

A highlight of the evening was the acknowledgesment of Charles and Freda Edgerton of Stratford, whose half-million-dollar gift allowed the University to install air conditioning and new seats in the Center for the Performing Arts.

This year's Discovery Awards and Scholarship Dinner will be held on May 10, 2003.

The 2002 Pioneer Open's 13th annual golf tournament was a smashing success, from the bright and sunny day to the more than $70,000 raised for Sacred Heart University scholarship programs - the highest in University history.

Held at Woodbridge Country Club in Woodbridge, Connecticut, the Official Tournament Sponsors were AT&T Business Services and DELL. A field of 132 golfers spent a delightful afternoon and evening accepting the challenge of a magnificent golf course, and enjoying a dinner afterwards that featured a world-class raw bar and a menu to suit every taste.

The accomplishments on the golf course were equally impressive. Josh Blau carded a hole-in-one on the par three 8th hole, Bill Belewic won the longest-drive competition, and the team of Mark Appelberg of Trumbull, Brad Adolphson of Monroe, Mike Niedermeier of Trumbull, and John Strevans of Shelton finished the day with the low gross.

The Pioneer Open co-chairmen were Matthew Reale '86 of Shelton and Tom Brennan '78 of Branford. Laurie Bellico '88 served as tournament director. Committee members included: Tim Cadley, Ray Cassidy '88 MBA, Steve Courtney, Peter Francini, Mark Kutner, T.J. Lanese, Rick Mariani '88, John Spradlin, Gino Tarantino '85, John Young, Rob Cottle '90, Mike Giaquinto, Ann Miron, Rebecca Rickert, Julie Savino '79, Marie Sekelsky, and Mary Young.

Next Pioneer Open scheduled for June 2, 2003 at the Patterson Club in Fairfield, CT. Call Rob Cottle, 203-365-4801 for more information.
1,600 Scholars Earn University Degrees

Almost 1,600 students received degrees at Sacred Heart University's 36th annual Commencement ceremonies held in May 2002. The record numbers called for separate outdoor ceremonies on Saturday, May 18th, for graduate students, and Sunday, May 19th, for undergraduates. In addition, three distinguished members of the community were awarded honorary degrees from the University.

At the weekend's first Commencement rite, Lee Ann Riley received the Bishop Walter W. Curtis Medal of Honor and delivered the graduation address to more than 500 new alumni. She is the founder and executive director of the Norma Pfriem Breast Care Center and a well-known advocate for breast cancer care and research.

The following day, nearly 1,100 men and women earned certificates, and associate's and bachelor's degrees. Professor John Lienhard addressed the assembly. He is a noted author and host of National Public Radio's Engines of Our Ingenuity. Dr. Lienhard was presented the Doctor of Humane Letters degree, honoris causa.

The other honorary degree recipients were Dr. Paul W. MacAvoy, Williams Brothers Professor of Management Studies at the Yale School of Management and a former presidential advisor; and Nelson Broms, vice chairman of iQ NetSolutions, Inc., and senior advisor to the chairman of the UtiliCorp United.

of campus life for only a little more than a quarter of the school's life span, almost 95 percent of graduates knew of that option. Majorities were also aware of the University's website (72.2 percent) and its Division 1 athletic status (59.3 percent). Interestingly, a fifth already knew about the University's new Polling Institute – the very organization that was conducting the survey. A substantial majority (94.3 percent) indicated they were either “very” or “somewhat” satisfied with their overall experience as an undergraduate student, and similar percentages felt that way about their academic experiences.

Among other encouraging findings, well over half of the respondents (57.3 percent) expressed a willingness to enroll in an advanced degree program, and 50.6 percent said they were willing to attend social or networking events. Indeed, one-sixth of alumni have volunteered their time for the University within the past five years.

Alumni evaluated the reasons they attended the University in the first place. Fully 62 percent cited the school's advantageous location, and more than a quarter mentioned affordability. Other top draws included the availability of certain academic programs, the University's reputation and small class sizes, its generous scholarship program and its Catholic tradition.

The demographic profile this survey paints is extremely revealing. Of the 403 randomly selected participants, almost nine in ten had commuted to the campus. The largest percentage (57 percent) were in their 40s and 50s, and almost two-thirds were female. Just over 65 percent were undergraduate alumni, and 26.6 percent held master's degrees. A third of the respondents had received financial assistance while enrolled at the University. While almost 73 percent had graduated within four years of first enrolling, 17.9 percent were at it up to eight years, and a full five percent took up to 12 years.

Almost 15 percent were involved in athletics, and more than 80 percent worked while in college. The alumni have fared well in the business world. Fewer than 12 percent earn less than $35,000 a year. Almost 20 percent earn between $35,000 and $65,000, and almost 30 percent report incomes between $65,000 and $95,000 and above.
Ifiawlin "Pete" Fairbaugh has enjoyed a unique perspective on changes in Europe's former Eastern Bloc. Each spring since 1996, he and fellow-Professor Lucjan Orlowski have taught business courses to juniors at the College for Modern Business Studies in Tatabanya, Hungary. At the end of the week-long program, he asks his students what they have found different about his approach to business from their normal course of studies. "One time, the class grew quiet," he recalls, "and then a brave young woman spoke up: 'Everything,' she answered."

The 10-year-old college attracts learners from several nearby European countries, and in an overt acknowledgement of the growing globalization of business, it requires all students either to take a semester abroad the first semester of their senior year or work for an international company for that term.

The students in classes taught by Professor Orlowski and Professor Fairbaugh are a part of an international studies week the college hosts each spring. Instructors from the United States and such European neighbors as Belgium, Germany and Holland teach business classes for students from the new Europe – one that bridges the Capitalist West with the formerly Communist East. Each scholar is required to write an evaluation paper at the conclusion of the course – in English.

As founder of the University's Luxembourg campus, Dr. Fairbaugh is enthusiastic about international study. He was especially pleased when one of his students decided to take his semester abroad at Sacred Heart University, and he hopes the positive experience Balasz Bakany enjoyed on campus will be the beginning of an ongoing exchange.

Corporate Strategies Forums Feature Diverse Leaders

Sacred Heart University hosted two very different business leaders in separate Corporate Strategies forums in recent months. The seminars are designed to provide students, faculty members and the larger community the chance to hear men and women of exceptional accomplishment and insight as they share their philosophies and experience. An informal reception lets participants chat with these influential decision-makers.

Nathaniel D. Woodson is chairman, president and chief executive officer of UIL Holdings Corporation, a holding company for the United Illuminating Company and United Resources, Inc., based in New Haven. He spoke about community involvement for today's business leaders.

Mr. Woodson became president in February 1998 and assumed the position of CEO in May of that year. He was named chairman of the board of directors at the end of 1998. Previously, he was president of the Energy Systems Business Unit for Westinghouse Electric Corporation, where he was responsible for the company's global commercial nuclear power generation activities.

As a prominent and very visible business leader, Mr. Woodson has an active role in the community. His current commitments range from bank and hospital boards to chairing the United Way and the Regional Leadership Council.

He began his career at Westinghouse in 1966 as an engineer and then held a series of key project management positions in Pittsburgh, and later in Europe, where he lived for five years. His assignments included all construction projects, technology, manufacturing and service for the company's worldwide customers. In 1993, Nathaniel Woodson was awarded the Westinghouse Order of Merit, the company's highest honor, in recognition of his leadership and his unrelenting commitment to Total Quality.

Mr. Woodson graduated from Yale University with a bachelor of engineering degree in mechanical engineering in 1963. He earned a master's degree in nuclear engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1966. He subsequently earned a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1969 and in 1980 completed the advanced management program at the Harvard University Business School.

People Magazine calls Keith Clinkscales the "Sexiest Businessman Alive." But before he earned that title, he was busy creating and nurturing a growing media empire. He addressed the Corporate Strategies forum on tapping the urban market.

Not yet 40, he is chairman of the board and CEO of Vanguarde Media, Inc., and he is very much at the vanguard of his industry. In fact, the Washington Post has called him the "boy wonder of black magazine publishing," VMI, as his company is also known, is a dominant force in defining America's important urban marketplace. Reaching an enormous and largely undervalued market, VMI focuses on lifestyles that transcend race, class and religion.

Mr. Clinkscales put his Harvard MBA to good use as the first African-American named a president at Time, Inc., where he headed Vibe Magazine, the so-called hip hop bible. He was one of the first people in publishing to recognize the power of the Internet to enhance the urban market, launching Vibe.com in 1994.

His special gift has been to recognize unmet needs and to work to fill them. He created VMI in 1999 to explore relevant issues, interests and concerns of the contemporary urban audience. Today, the firm produces Impact, a trade publication for top decision-makers in the radio industry, as well as Honey, a fashion and entertainment piece for young urban women. It also puts out Heart & Soul, which promotes a healthy lifestyle for today's black woman, and Savoy, a slick, attractive magazine dedicated to affluent black readers.
A Visit to Luxembourg's Multicultural Business World
By Christopher J. Sheehan

The sad wisdom of this jest is immediately evident when visiting a country like Luxembourg. It is a land where everyone, or so it seems, has mastered several languages. The desk clerk at a small hotel—a young woman of maybe 19 or 20—will slip effortlessly between German and French on the telephone and then address visitors at the desk in very serviceable English.

Visiting Americans know they are heading back home, however, when the opening announcements on their plane are offered first in English, then in halting German and French. And the safety instructions, oddly enough, are broadcast in English only!

For more than a decade now, Sacred Heart University has occupied a unique big-frog-in-a-small-pond position in Luxembourg. The University sponsors the only American-style Master of Business Administration degree in a country smaller than Rhode Island but with nearly 200 often-multinational banks. Because of its extensive financial operations and its kingpin status within the expanding European Union, Luxembourg is an ideal setting for multicultural business education, and Sacred Heart University has become an important international resource there. The University's capital city headquarters is an easy drive to France, Belgium and Germany.

A recent MBA class conducted by Professor Laurence M. Weinstein from the Fairfield campus illustrates the dimensions of the new world that is being born and nurtured in Luxembourg. With a roster of 16, the course in Marketing Issues included five students who were native Luxembourgers. The others hailed from five different continents, and each brought something compelling and valuable to the table. In one room were "pioneers" of the new global economy with roots in Europe, North America, South America, Africa and Asia.

Facility in language allowed everyone to work together. One young scholar from Korea spoke her native language, of course, and perfect English and French, as well as German. She drew the line, she said, at Japanese. Now, Japanese is hard! The Americans in the group, used to the world beating a path to their door, could rarely offer the same willingness to adopt and adapt.

All were working to master the principles of marketing, aware of their obvious differences but willing to work together in spite of those differences. Everyone spoke in the new international language of business, English, seemingly unconscious of the heady experiment in which each played a leading role.

Just a few miles from the Sacred Heart University complex in downtown Luxembourg City, five thousand Americans lay buried in a serene and beautiful cemetery. They are interred with their commander, General George S. Patton, who, it is said, wanted to be buried with his men. Only two generations ago, these American soldiers were aware of the differences that separated them from their enemies and knew there would be no working together: it was a fight to the death.

The "new Europe" is far from complete, but the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, along with such bold experiments as the Sacred Heart University satellite there, gives one hope that differences don't need to divide, that competition in the boardroom beats combat on the battlefield any day. After all, if tiny packets of hand tissues can come with instructions in four languages—Flemish, English, French and German—then maybe there's a way we can all get along after all.

Pierre Werner, a former member of the Board of Regents for Sacred Heart University in Luxembourg, died June 24, 2002. The former Prime Minister of Luxembourg also assisted in the development of the Luxembourg campus, and was one of the most influential policymakers helping to unify Europe. Considered instrumental in creating the "economic miracle" of the current Luxembourg economy, he is perhaps best known as the author of the white paper that laid out a framework for the euro. Even though his dream took 30 years to realize, he lived long enough to see the euro become the common currency of Europe.

Prime Minister Werner last attended a Regents' meeting in 1999, shortly before he was incapacitated by a stroke. Friends recall his humanity, charm and belief in bringing peoples of the world together.

A public memorial service, attended by local dignitaries and members of the diplomatic corps as well as several high-ranking foreign mourners, was held on June 28th at Notre Dame Cathedral in Luxembourg City.
January 5, 2003 marked a sad milestone for the Sacred Heart University community. John A. Croffy, Sr., retired Dean of Students and Vice President of Student Services at Sacred Heart University died at the age of 81.

President Anthony J. Cernera, who delivered a moving tribute at John Croffy's Mass of Christian Burial at Assumption Church in Westport, Conn., spoke for us all when he said: "John's many contributions to Sacred Heart University were truly extraordinary. He was there at the beginning, leaving a secure academic position in New Jersey in 1963 to follow a dream. He dedicated the rest of his life making that dream come true—and we are all the richer for it."

Recalling Dean Croffy, Matt Reale, '86, and President of the Sacred Heart University Alumni Association said: "Very few people have the ability to touch someone and affect that person's life for the better. I consider myself a better person today for having known him."

Throughout his 24-year tenure, Dean Croffy, as he was known to thousands of students, alumni and friends, was one of the most admired administrators at Sacred Heart University. A gifted people person to the core, his face became the most familiar on campus. No one doubts that he made a difference in the lives of thousands of students, many of whom might not have completed their education without his encouragement and counsel.

In the University's first year, he served as the Director of Student Personnel Services, the 1963 equivalent of Vice President for Student Services. Dean Croffy was also a founding member of the faculty. Listed among his accomplishments was participation in the University's initial accreditation, as well as fulfilling the role of principal admissions officer for the first 10,000 enrolled students.

In his latter days as Dean of Students and Vice President for Student Services, he made it a practice to invite four students to lunch each weekday during the academic year. It was his intent to show that Sacred Heart University was true to its mission: that it cared about the individual. To this day, the highest student involvement award bears his name. The John Croffy award is given annually to a Sacred Heart University student who through participation and involvement in student life exemplifies outstanding leadership.

John Croffy was already an established educator when he joined the faculty of a fledgling Catholic institution close to 40 years ago. He had taught and served in various administrative capacities at Seton Hall University, his alma mater, from which he earned a bachelor's and two master's degrees. He had also taught high school mathematics for 16 years in Jersey City, New Jersey.

His entry into post-graduate studies and a professional career was delayed by military service in World War II. He served with a U.S. Army anti-aircraft unit in the European theater, suffered leg and back wounds near Antwerp, Belgium and was awarded the Purple Heart. He left the army with the rank of first sergeant.

Survivors, in addition to his wife of 59 years, Virginia, include three sons, John A. Croffy Jr. and his wife, Theresa, of Fairfield, Dr. Bruce Croffy of Los Angeles, and Linus Croffy and his wife, Marianne, of Milford; two daughters, Anne Stocking and her husband, Dale, of Navato, Calif., and Gail Griffiths and her husband, William, of Melbourne, Fla. He was the loving grandfather of 10 grandchildren: Jennifer, Jaime, Danielle, Alessandra and Jonathan Croffy, Dana and Casie Stocking, and William VI, Kathleen and Sean Griffiths; and four great-grandchildren.

At the family's request, memorial contributions may be made to the John A. Croffy, Sr. Endowment Fund, Sacred Heart University, 5151 Park Avenue, Fairfield, CT 06825.

Perhaps Dean John Croffy's lasting legacy will be that he truly lived the University's mission to prepare men and women to live in and make their contributions to the human community.
Charles and Freda Edgerton

When he was a young man, Charlie Edgerton enjoyed Baptist summer camp, and he entertained becoming a minister. His wife Freda was attracted to the missionary vocation. But life had more mundane plans, and the two became fixtures in Monroe and the surrounding communities. They raised two sons and a daughter and established a firm long known for quality and customer service.

Edgerton Heating & Air Conditioning was established in 1956, and its fleet of trucks are a common sight in Greater Bridgeport. The company president, now 74, doesn’t seem to know the meaning of the word “retirement” and his 12-hour days typically begin by 6:30 a.m. A 1946 graduate of Bridgeport’s Bassick High School, he served in the Marine Corps for two years and attended the New York Technical Institute.

After valuable experience in several companies, he created his own. While it now has more than 50 employees, it is still very much a family venture. Freda was his first business partner; on Sunday nights, they’d work on the bills together. She stayed with the firm for years. His sister Grace has been in the office since 1969, and his son and son-in-law are both senior officers.

A man of steady habits, Charlie Edgerton is also capable of surprises. He took up motorcycles in his 60s, for example, and now boasts a half-dozen Harleys. The Edgerton Center for the Performing Arts at Sacred Heart University is the latest trick up his sleeve. He and Freda have contributed $500,000 to the University to lead the refurbishing of this vital community resource. For the first time in its history, the auditorium is now air conditioned, and the 800+ seats have all been replaced.

Although Mrs. Edgerton has been a library and museum volunteer for decades, the couple has not been exclusively connected with the theater. Still, they appreciate the personal connection this has afforded them to the mission of the University. “I like knowing that our gift will be put to such good use, and seeing where our contribution is going. Everyone at the University, especially President Cernera, has just been terrific, and we couldn’t be happier with our decision.”
Louella Lieberman

There is a photo that Louella Lieberman cherishes recording an unlikely event in her life. She is in an audience with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican. Just as an aide had announced that the time was up, Rabbi Joseph H. Ehrenkranz suggested that she personally greet His Holiness. "I couldn't think of what to say," she recalls, "so I just said, 'Bless you, Father.'" She laughs out loud at the thought of greeting the Pope: "Me: a little Jewish girl from the Bronx!"

And what makes the memento especially appealing is the small image of a hand at the edge of the photograph. Although you probably wouldn't guess by looking at the photograph, the hand belongs to a papal aide escorting them off the scene - while Amy Louella Prakin Lieberman is working to get the last word in!

Louella Lieberman has been a widow for some five years. Her husband David made his living producing men's hat bands, and he invented the adjustable-strap baseball cap that is the uniform of the day for America's teenagers and college students. He was a member of the board for Sacred Heart University's Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding, and after his death, she grew closer to the pioneering organization that promotes dialogue and interreligious healing.

Two years ago, Mrs. Lieberman made a substantial donation to the Center, whose executive director is her dear friend and neighbor, Rabbi Ehrenkranz. Although she holds the goals of the CCJU close to her heart and was happy to offer this gift, she makes light of her role in ensuring the future of this significant organization. "There's nothing to say about me," she says with a characteristic shrug and a laugh. "I don't know why you'd want to say anything about me!"

An unabashed New York City chauvinist, she lived briefly in the Deep South when first married – and hated it. "It was before desegregation," she recalls, "and it was just too awful to live there. Besides, there's no place like New York. I've been to Paris and Rome, and I'll tell you: New York is the only real city in the world. It's always great to get back." Mrs. Lieberman spent more than 40 years with Lane Bryant there, where she became the office manager. Though she lives in Stamford now, her heart is still in the Big Apple.

And a big piece of her heart belongs to Sacred Heart University and its Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding.

What is the Gold Society?

The Graduates of the Last Decade (GOLD) Society was established by the University to recognize alumni who have graduated within the past decade and, as leaders, have stepped forward to give back to their alma mater. Membership extends for one year to any individual or couple who gives $100 or more to the Sacred Heart University Scholarship Fund.

Gifts from GOLD Society members provide direct support to the Sacred Heart University Scholarship Fund and financial assistance to our deserving students. These gifts demonstrate a belief in the University’s mission of producing graduates who are knowledgeable of self, rooted in faith, educated in mind, compassionate in heart, responsive to social and civic obligations and able to respond to an ever-changing world.

PRESIDENT'S SOCIETY

What is the President's Society?
The President's Society was founded to recognize distinguished philanthropy at Sacred Heart University. Its mission is crystal clear: to provide financial assistance for students through the Sacred Heart University Scholarship Fund.

Through generous support by members of the President's Society, the University is able to provide continued educational excellence to students, respond to students' financial needs, and foster growth while maintaining the school's sound fiscal position. To produce graduates with the best possible preparation for success in their career and personal lives, educational opportunities must continue to expand. Support by President's Society members helps this to become a reality.

We thank you for your commitment to our students.

EXAMINING THE CATHOLIC INTELLECTUAL TRADITION
Volume 2: Issues and Perspectives

This new volume, edited by Sacred Heart University President Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D., and Oliver J. Morgan, Ph.D, continues and expands on the conversations in Volume 1 about the vitality, influence and contemporary relevance of the Catholic intellectual tradition. The particular focus of this volume is to explore what it means to imbue that tradition in the day-to-day life at Catholic colleges and universities.

Limited editions are available for $24.95 plus $4.50 shipping & handling. Connecticut residents please add 6% sales tax. To order, call (203) 396-8097.

Prayers from the Heart
THE SACRED HEART UNIVERSITY PRAYERBOOK

An inspiring collection of prayers, reflections, and poems written by the Sacred Heart University community, Prayers from the Heart, edited by Patricia Leonard Pasley, provides not only a helpful tool for one's personal spiritual growth, but also a wonderful resource for groups who wish to pray together. Reflecting on the spiritual rationale for Prayers from the Heart, President Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D, said: "Simply put, we pray because we are a learning community and prayer is a vital part of our education as Spirit-filled human beings."

Prayers from the Heart is available for $14.95 plus $4.50 shipping & handling; $1.50 shipping and handling for each additional book. Connecticut residents please add 6% sales tax. To order, call (203) 365-4710.

Or, visit the Sacred Heart University Press website at http://shupress.sacredheart.edu, where you can find more information, including other titles.
On October 4th and 5th, Sacred Heart University alumni, students, parents, faculty, staff and friends gathered to celebrate tradition, Pioneer athletics and many campus activities during Homecoming/Reunion Weekend. Activities throughout the weekend included a carnival, bonfire, pep rally, parade, football game vs. Robert Morris, Alumni Association Luncheon & Awards Presentation, alumni tailgating tent, faculty lecture, affinity reunions and a Celebration of a Decade of Pioneer Football Reception. The football game, by the way, was a satisfying shutout: 34-0.

Over 600 alumni from across the country stepped back on campus for these and many other activities. For the first time in Sacred Heart University history, students participated in the Homecoming events. The Student Alumni Association rallied to gain spirit among the classes during the pep rally while the "Battle of the Classes" took place. The Class of 2003 won the competition and took home the...

Another new tradition on campus was the Homecoming King & Queen competition. The winners were sophomore, Guy Savage and junior, Lilly Orellana.

During the annual Alumni Association Luncheon & Awards Presentation, over 130 alumni gathered in the William H. Pitt Health and Recreation Center to celebrate 12 alumni’s accomplishments in the community, in their profession and for Sacred Heart University. Four of the honorees that were highlighted include Laurie Bellico '88, '97 MBA, Matthew Reale, Esq. '86, Karin Douglas '84 and Tom Brennan '78. The weekend was a great beginning that will continue on campus year after year. Plans are already under way for next year's activities.

Hundreds gathered under the Alumni Tent for refreshments.
Mark April, 2002 as a milestone in Sacred Heart University sports history! DeVeren Johnson became the first Sacred Heart University athlete – and the first player in the Northeast Conference (NEC) – to be drafted by a National Football League team. The lanky wide receiver was drafted in the sixth round by the Dallas Cowboys, as the 208th selection.

The spirit and skill that he brought to the Pioneers during his two years as wide receiver was clearly evident over the summer as he was often featured in the HBO special series Hard Knocks. At the end of the summer, Johnson had been placed on the Cowboys’ practice squad, to give him the opportunity to hone his skills working directly with the receivers’ coach and head coach Dave Campo. The future looks bright.

In a recent conversation when he returned to the Sacred Heart campus to receive his NCAA Division I-AA Mid-Major National Championship ring, Johnson said: “Being on the practice squad is a real opportunity for me. I’m learning very fast and the number of reps I get each day has improved my skills amazingly. And it’s great working with the coaches so closely because they can point out where I need to improve my skills face-to-face.”

At Sacred Heart, the six-foot-six, 220-pound Johnson left an indelible impression. Though he hadn’t played football since his junior year in high school, and came to Sacred Heart as a basketball player, he quickly made up for lost time. By the time he concluded his Pioneer career, he had been named Receiver of the Year by Don Hansen’s National Football Gazette, a first-team All-America by the National Football Gazette and Sports Network, and was voted a first-team NEC All-Star.

In the two years Johnson served as Sacred Heart’s top target, the Pioneers went 21-1, captured their first NEC title and won the ECAC Bowl 31-15 over Duquesne in Pittsburgh. When it was all over, Sacred Heart University ruled as the NCAA Division I-AA Mid-Major national champion.

Johnson also left a host of personal records for future Pioneers to aim at. He established new single-season marks in receptions, yards gained, longest gain, average yards per catch, touchdowns and average yards per game. His impressive career standards include most yards gained by a receiver, average yards per catch, touchdowns and longest reception.

Practice makes sure hands even surer.
Lemanczyk Drafted by St. Louis Cardinals and leads Rookie League in stolen bases

As the Sacred Heart University baseball team prepares for the 2003 season, they find themselves without one of the mainstays of its program, but there is great pride in knowing that one of their own has a shot to one day play in the Major Leagues. Matt Lemanczyk, the Pioneers' fleet centerfielder and the son of a major leaguer, was selected by the St. Louis Cardinals in the 10th round of the amateur baseball draft at the conclusion of the 2002 season.

Playing for the Johnson City Cardinals in the rookie-level Appalachian League, Lemanczyk finished the year with a .239 batting average in 60 games. He led the league in stolen bases with 31 and was caught stealing just six times. He led his team in sacrifice bunts and was also hit by a pitch a team-high seven times.

Lemanczyk, from Rockville Centre, NY, capped an outstanding four-year career with the Pioneers last spring, batting .380 and breaking his own University and Northeast Conference (NEC) stolen base records with 41. He finished third nationally in steals per game among Division I players.

The six-foot-three, 200-pound outfielder became the first Pioneer player to be drafted since Mike Bjada, a hard-throwing right-handed pitcher from Shelton, was picked by the Detroit Tigers in 1994.

Lemanczyk, who was a first-team All-NEC selection for the second straight season, led the team in virtually every offensive category this year. In addition to batting and steals, he was tops with 70 hits, 41 runs scored, .576 slugging percentage, five home runs, six triples and 106 total bases. The latter two were school records. In the field, he committed just two errors in 123 chances for a .984 percentage.

He also set Pioneer career records with 267 hits, 175 runs, 368 total bases, 14 triples and 141 stolen bases. His career average was .363.

Lemanczyk’s father, Dave, pitched in the American League for eight years (1973-80) with the Detroit Tigers, Toronto Blue Jays and California Angels.

Sacred Heart Pioneers Launch New Website!

The Sacred Heart University Department of Athletics, in conjunction with Student Advantage’s Official College Sports Network, recently unveiled the school’s official athletic website located at www.SacredHeartPioneers.com. The site, which launched on September 5, is the only official source of information, multimedia and more, directly from the Sacred Heart University Department of Athletics.

Along with the new look, SacredHeartPioneers.com offers expanded efforts to provide alumni, fans and media with complete information on all Pioneer sports. The site features live game audio clips, schedules, ticket information, donation information, interactive games, and promotions. Throughout the year, there will be opportunities to interact online with Pioneer athletes and coaches.

“I expect our new site to be a key tool in keeping our fans informed of the most up-to-date and complete coverage of Pioneer Athletics,” said SHU athletic director Don Cook.

“The website will support all the University coaches and athletic programs in their recruitment of prospective student-athletes, and we encourage prospective student-athletes to visit the links that will connect them and their parents with the University recruitment process.”

Fans can now purchase season, mini-plan and individual game tickets online. The Pioneers are pleased to offer this service in partnership with OCSN and the new athletic website, SacredHeartPioneers.com. In addition, the athletic department also has a new ticket number. Anyone wishing to purchase tickets can now call 203-396-TIXX (396-8499).

Sacred Heart University • Winter 2003
They call him “The Road Guru.” When alumnus Dave Licursi ’92 was a student at Sacred Heart University, he was already a veteran DJ. Starting his business of providing musical entertainment at the age of 13, he was very experienced when it came to working SHU student events.

But Licursi was no ordinary DJ, in fact, even in the late 80s; he knew that he had bigger plans for himself. His business, Ultra Entertainment, managed and coordinated bands, comedians and disc jockey shows.

While attending Sacred Heart University, Licursi worked for a local sound company and began learning about sound engineering. He began working on projects with popular bands at that time like The Alarm and INXS. At age 20, he earned his first opportunity as a tour manager for a funk group called The Average White Band.

He recalls his first experience as a tour manager: “I remember setting up an entire tour, working with promoters and vendors on the phone. When they would finally meet me in person, they wouldn’t believe that I was running the tour. Because of my age, I had to work very hard to gain the respect of people who had been in the music business much longer than I.”

His most recognizable break came when he served as the tour manager for the popular artist Darryl Hall. Upon proving himself with Hall’s solo tour, he served as tour manager for a number of popular musicians. Beginning with the Darryl Hall & John Oates Reunion Tour, he served as tour manager, production manager and tour accountant.

What does all that mean, you may ask. “I am basically a logistics expert,” Licursi comments. He is ultimately responsible for making sure the tour happens, the production crews do what they need to do, the artists go where they need to go, and in the end, a profit is made. In the last decade, Licursi has worked with dozens of big name entertainers including Mariah Carey, Tony Bennett and Billy Joel.

In 1998 Dave Licursi began working for musician Kid Rock. They began promoting this up-and-coming star, spent over three years touring the world, and in the process were able to sell over 10 million records. As a result of this successful tour, Pollstar Magazine nominated him for “Tour Manager of the Year,” along with two other well-known managers.

This was a significant achievement and one Licursi was flattered by. “Just merely being mentioned in the company of successful people like Jake Berry (Rolling Stones) and Marty Homm (Janet Jackson) is an incredible feeling!”

Since 2001, Licursi has worked with the popular band Sugar Ray where he has toured until this past fall when the band headed back to the studio for recording. Throughout this time, he has traveled the world, which included organizing the halftime show at the 2002 Pro Bowl of the National Football League in Honolulu, Hawaii.

His latest venture is a company called Concerts 101, in which he partnered with Kingdom Entertainment, a New York-based management company. It is designed to market college tours across the country and to help colleges and universities conduct successful events. “By obtaining corporate sponsorships, we eliminate the financial burden for the school and with our service-oriented approach, we can help colleges and universities host a successful and profitable event,” says Licursi.

Reflecting on his Sacred Heart University experience, he truly loved his time here and will forever have fond memories. Though he does keep in touch with friends from SHU, Licursi admits his schedule does not really allow for him to be home much.

While his may seem like a hectic schedule, Licursi’s advice to current students is simple: “Do what you love, sacrifice and do whatever it takes.” He has traveled the world many times over and has experienced things most would only dream about. Eventually he plans to slow down from the road a bit, possibly getting into artist management. For now, he’s enjoying the ride, and looking forward to the next big show.
In computing, there is a premium placed on absolute accuracy. The slightest error can mean disaster. It's no wonder that Sacred Heart University's Computer Science Department was such a draw to Jose Alex Quijano of San Salvador, El Salvador.

Need proof of his affinity for accuracy? Ask him when he first came to the United States to begin pursuing a lifelong dream.

"It was November 6, 1993, at 5:30 and 35 seconds in the afternoon in Miami, Florida. That's when the plane landed." And he says it as if everyone would be just as specific.

The journey that he has been on since then is just as astounding as his accurate recollection of the precise time he arrived.

Growing up in the hardscrabble times that enveloped El Salvador in the early 1990s, Alex and his family were touched by the kindness of a stranger—Ed Purcell, the manager of a hotel chain in Fairfield, Connecticut. That initial touch was through World Vision, an organization that provides aid to underdeveloped areas of the world, through the contributions of people like Ed Purcell. Usually a contributor provides money to World Vision, which then distributes it to children for food and education. In most cases the contact is accomplished through letters that chart the progress of the student and tell the contributor things about the recipient's life in his or her home country. The relationship is usually conducted from a distance, and lasts until the child no longer is in school, which in most cases means graduating from high school, at best.

That wasn't the case with Alex and Ed Purcell. In June of 1993, Mr. Purcell visited El Salvador and met Alex and the Quijano family. He lived with the family for a week and got to know Alex's hopes and aspirations. He said, as he left, that he would come back "someday," and Alex held on to that possibility.

In October of the same year, Mr. Purcell returned with an offer to the Quijano family. He would bring Alex to the United States, where he would live with the Purcell family, enroll at Kolbe Cathedral, a Catholic high school in Bridgeport, and then continue on to college after graduation.

Though the initial adaptation to his new culture was challenging, Alex was up to the task. He completed his high school education in 1995 and enrolled at Sacred Heart University that fall. Originally, he had intended to major in Biology, but the additional demands of language made it impossible.

"The teachers were really helpful," he said, "and would work with me after class and in the labs. But the technical language was just too difficult and it was hard keeping up. So, I decided to change majors and continue to learn." He majored in Spanish and got a certificate in Information Technology. Those decisions helped him chart his future.

Upon graduation from Sacred Heart University in the spring of 2000, Alex enrolled in the master's program in Computer Science. The year was made even more memorable by the fact that his younger brother, Robert, joined him that fall and began classes at Kolbe Cathedral.

In May of 2002, the Quijano family gathered to celebrate the completion of Alex's master's degree. It was easy to see the pride in the eyes of his mother, Marta, who had not seen Alex in seven years, and the thrill that his uncle Fausto felt at being present at this august event.

For Alex, it was the end of one story and the beginning of another. He is presently enrolled in the M.B.A. program at Sacred Heart University, and eager to have his brother Robert join him on campus when Robert finishes his associate's degree in Computer Science at Housatonic Community College in Bridgeport.

And for Ed Purcell, in addition to being a benefactor to Alex and Robert, he is also providing support for five more students - three in El Salvador and two in Guatemala. For him, the rewards are measured in the joy that was evident in the faces of the Quijano family as they watched Alex walk across the stage and receive his diploma.
Sacred Heart University has welcomed five new members to its top governing body, the Board of Trustees. The five are Michael C. Dailey, founder, president and CEO of Dailey Capital Management; Kris E. Durmer, Esq., an attorney with Smith-Weiss Shepard & Durmer; Paul W. MacAvoy, Ph.D., the Williams Brothers Professor of Management Studies at Yale; William E. Mitchell, co-owner and president of Mitchells of Westport; and James T. Morley, former senior group vice president of Cox Radio, Inc.

In addition, the University announced the appointment of Christopher K. McLeod as vice chairman of the Board of Trustees and Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Mr. McLeod is the executive vice president of CuraGen Corporation, New Haven. CuraGen Corporation is a genomics-based pharmaceutical company. Prior to his current position with CuraGen, Mr. McLeod served as vice chairman and director, Cendant Corporation, and Executive Vice President, CUC, International, Inc.

A magna cum laude graduate of Yale, Class of 1977, Mr. McLeod went on to the M.I.T. Sloan School of Management, where he received a Master of Science degree in Management in 1979.

Among his many philanthropic interests, Mr. McLeod serves as director, president and treasurer of the McLeod Blue Skye Charitable Foundation. In addition, he is a member of the Board of Directors, Connecticut Yankee Council of the Boy Scouts of America, and a member of the Board of Governors of Fairfield Prep. Also, he has previously served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Stamford United Way.

Mr. Dailey has served as president and CEO of Daily Capital Management since 1997. Before founding this company, he served as a partner of Peregrine Ventures in Southport. From 1980 till 1996, he was President and CEO of Triad Capital Management. During his 20-year career, he has generated more than 40 percent return to his investors – without any capital losses. Mr. Dailey has been profiled in numerous publications including Leaders Magazine, Wall Street Journal Transcript, and American Banker.

Michael Dailey is a 1975 Media Studies graduate of Sacred Heart University, and he holds an MBA from the University of Bridgeport. A member of the Sacred Heart University Board of Trustees from 1995 till 2000, he has received the University's Alumni Award of Excellence.

Attorney Durmer is the father of Sacred Heart University student Ashley Durmer. He is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and the Franklin Pierce Law Center. Mr. Durmer was admitted to the bar in 1979 and is a partner in the Nashua law firm of Smith-Weiss, Shepard & Durmer. He has long been active in state and national Democratic politics. Professor MacAvoy is nationally recognized for his penetrating analyses of management issues. Formerly dean and now Williams Brothers Professor of Management Studies at Yale University, he has taught at MIT, the University of Chicago and the University of Rochester. Dr. MacAvoy served on President Ford's Council of Economic Advisors, and he is credited with inventing the term "voodoo economics" while an advisor to the campaign of George H.W. Bush. He has served on the boards of several prominent companies, including Combustion Engineering, Colt Industries and the Chase Manhattan Bank Corp.

The author of 20 books and numerous articles in learned journals, Dr. MacAvoy is a 1955 graduate of Bates College. He received his master's degree and doctorate from Yale University. Among significant public honors, Dr. MacAvoy has been presented honorary degrees from Bates College and, last year, from Sacred Heart University.

Bill Mitchell received Sacred Heart University's Discovery Award in May 2002. After graduating from Juniata College in 1965, he joined the business his father had founded seven years earlier. The $50 million-a-year clothing business now has a base of 30,000 regular customers and is known as a paragon of customer service. In 2000, the Connecticut Retail Merchants Association honored Mitchells and its companion operation, Richards of Greenwich, with the Retailer of the Year award.

The family firm has long been known for its commitment to the community, and Mr. Mitchell is active locally and regionally. A deacon and trustee of the Saugatuck Congregational Church, he assists such organizations as the Jewish Home for the Elderly and the Inner City Foundation for Charity and Education.

James T. Morley served as senior group vice president of Cox Radio until his retirement in 1999. Mr. Morley began his career in broadcasting while still a senior at Boston College. His successful years in broadcasting included service at a number of prominent stations, including his appointment as station manager of WZRN-FM in 1979. Mr. Morley also served as senior vice president of Katz Communications until 1986, when he and several partners acquired the interests of Katz Communications' nine radio properties to form New City Communications. Later, after acquiring a number of additional stations, New City Communications agreed to sell the entire roster to Cox Radio, Inc., of Atlanta.

Mr. Morley is a Trustee for the Library of American Broadcasting. Among his other affiliations, he is a member of the Board of Directors of the New York Marketing and Radio Association, serves as a vice president and director of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra, and is a director of the Newtown Savings Bank.
