Nostra Aetate Awards

Rabbi, Cardinal Stress Faiths' Togetherness

Two leaders of different faiths, a cardinal and a rabbi, received Nostra Aetate Awards from the University's Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding (CCJU) at its fourth annual program and lecture on Nov. 17 in New York.

Of equal significance were the messages of hope that Cardinal Edward I. Cassidy, president of the Vatican's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews, and Rabbi Irving Greenberg, president of the Jewish Life Network, shared that evening.

"Both religions, if they wish to overcome, if they wish to purge the evil, if they wish to restore the world, must primarily focus on restoring the image of God," Rabbi Greenberg told the gathering of 300 in the Park Avenue Synagogue. "Both must restore the infinite value of every human life and not allow people to die of hunger for lack of a penny's worth of food, or to die of sickness for lack of medical care or medical insurance."

"Both religions," he said, "have to focus on establishing justice and love together. And to do so, they must stop the past of hatred or of put-downs or of fighting with each other."

In his lecture, "Dialogue in Our Time," Cardinal Cassidy also stressed the importance of friendship and partnership between the faiths.

"We have traveled a long way together since Nostra Aetate was promulgated. We have built a completely new relationship between our communities, a solid relationship that will last, no matter what storms may come to try us or new obstacles obstruct our path," the cardinal said.

"As our relationship has matured, we have become more and more aware of how much Jews and Christians have in common. When we open the books most sacred to us, the Sacred Scriptures, we open them to the same page. We have but one God..."

The Nostra Aetate Award is named after the 1965 Vatican II document that opened the doors of dialogue and mutual respect between Jews and Christians. ■

University Press Publishes Two New Books

What do Katharine Hepburn, Shirley Temple, President Ford and the citizens of Connecticut all have in common? The answer: former Connecticut Governor John Davis Lodge.

A new book, John Davis Lodge: A Life in Three Acts, offers a compelling look at the life of a man who was an actor, naval officer, politician and statesman. Published by Sacred Heart University Press, the book traces Lodge's full and active life, which bridged much of the 20th century. It is available from Enfield Distribution for $29.95 (to order, call 1-888-216-7611).

The book was written by award-winning author Thomas A. DeLong, who spent 11 years conducting research and interviewing nearly 300 people.

"Governor Lodge was a physically, morally and intellectually courageous man who proudly served his country," DeLong said. "I was always intrigued by how he was able to make a seamless transition from movies to politics to diplomatic service. That was one of the things that piqued my curiosity and got me interested in writing this book."

"The way Governor Lodge handled himself and conducted his life can really be seen as a role model for many of today's politicians and diplomats," DeLong continued.

"Despite his aristocratic upbringing, he was a man who was passionate about being connected to people. A man of total integrity, Governor Lodge shunned partisan politics in favor of championing issues important to the future of Connecticut. Among many other accomplishments, Governor Lodge was primarily responsible for the massive development of the Connecticut Turnpike system."

The grandson of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and a lawyer by training, John Lodge put aside the law and set his sights on Hollywood, acting in early talking pictures with the likes of Marlene Dietrich, Katharine Hepburn and Shirley Temple. Proficient in French, he later went on to star in 14 films in France, England and Italy.

The outbreak of World War II interrupted his acting career. Following 3 1/2 years of military service, he returned home and entered Connecticut politics, winning a seat in Congress in 1946 and becoming governor in 1951. After losing his reelection bid in 1954, Lodge was appointed ambassador to Spain by President Eisenhower. He later served as ambassador to Argentina and Switzerland.

"This biography is about a lot more than just John Davis Lodge," added DeLong. "It's as much about his wife, Francesca, and their rather remarkable relationship. A worldly woman who spoke many languages, Francesca had an uncommonly common touch, and an ability to reach out to people of many cultures. She was a true partner in every sense of the word who played an important role in his life."

Catholic Intellectual

A second book from Sacred Heart University Press examines a question central to the nature of the University. Due to be published in late January, Examining the Catholic Intellectual Tradition, co-edited by University President Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D., contains a collection of essays probing the content behind the term.

Essays focus on such topics as the ideal of the Catholic mind, the relationship between Catholicism and other faith traditions, notions of the Catholic artist and intellectual, and future directions for Catholic universities.

Established in 1995, Sacred Heart University Press has published three other books: Toward Greater Understanding, a collection of essays in honor of Cardinal John O'Connor; Vatican II: The Continuing Agenda; and Continuity and Plurality in Catholic Theology, the latter a collection of essays in honor of the Rev. Gerald A. McCool, S.J. ■

Athletic Director Back on Track After Surgery

Vacations are intended for R&R, but Don Cook's Florida getaway in August produced jarring news that has transformed his life.

Seemingly the picture of robust health, the University's director of athletics visited a walk-in clinic in Fort Myers to learn the cause of a nagging cough that had kept him awake most of the previous night. Just minutes into the examination, the doctor posed the following question:

"How long have you had this murmur?"

Cook was incredulous. "What are you talking about?" he finally managed. The diagnosis was a pronounced leak in his heart's mitral valve.

Disbelief set in. Here he was, an athlete all his life, a man who jogs and exercises on a daily basis. How could there be a heart problem?

Back home, visits to his primary care physician and a heart specialist confirmed the diagnosis, and the specialist recommended immediate heart surgery. "There is a threat that your heart will enlarge, and that will create other problems," Cook was told.

Finding the best surgeon presented a challenge, but Cook's daughter and son-in-law, both doctors in residence at a hospital in Brooklyn, stepped in. After days of diligent research, they found their man at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in Manhattan: Dr. Mehmet Oz. A surgeon so skillful that he is known as the "Wizard of Oz," a man so focused that he received his M.D. and MBA from the University of

Pennsylvania on the same day. Open heart surgery was scheduled for Oct. 26.

The timing wasn't terrific, coming as it did in the beginning of the University's inaugural year in Division I. There were coaches and athletes to counsel, a Celebrity Breakfast to plan, 33 varsity sports to oversee. But Cook had no choice.

The surgery was performed on a bright fall day in New York City. Just eight days later, Cook was home in Black Rock and pecking away on his laptop, if only for a brief period each day.

Happily, staff members were quick to step forward in the weeks leading up to the surgery, and then afterward during his lengthy recovery period. For the first time in his seven years on campus – and probably including his earlier years as athletic director at Fairfield University and the University of Hartford – Cook was able to off-load some of his work. For example, Bippy Luckie, the associate director of athletics, made a presentation to the University's Board of Trustees in his absence.

"The coaches, Bippy, (secretary) Sheryl (Madison), they've all been good. Whatever they can do to help, they've done," Cook said. "(Vice President) Jim Barquinero has been tremendous to me personally. Mark (Adzigan, the new director of sports marketing) has been a real help."

As he continues to regain his strength and resume normal activities, Cook is still reveling in the outpouring of affection he has received from the University community. "It's been tremendous," he said. "Cards from several teams, from the coaches and other people on campus. Baskets of fruit, flowers."

"It reminds me of what President Cerna says: 'We're at our best in crisis.'" ■

Guess What?

Nobody guessed that Don Cook was last month's "Guess Who?" And so he will receive the $25 gift certificate to the University bookstore.

CCJU's Director Participates in Vatican Conference

Finding a route to peace and harmony in the third millennium was the focus of a worldwide conference held in the Vatican on Oct. 24-29.

Rabbi Joseph H. Ehrenkranz, executive director of the University's Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding (CCJU), was among a select group of 200 participants representing 20 religions and 50 countries at the Interreligious Assembly. He was among 12 Jewish delegates and only three from the United States.

"The importance of education is one of the key ideas I came away with," Rabbi Ehrenkranz said. "You have to educate people to the feeling that each individual is valued and unique in God's eyes."

In his message to the gathering, Pope John Paul II stressed that religious leaders have a vital role to play "in nurturing that hope of justice and peace without which there will be no future worthy of humanity."

"The task before us is to promote a culture of dialogue," the Pontiff said. "Individually and together, we must show how religious belief inspires peace, encourages solidarity, promotes justice and upholds liberty."

"He is the only Pope who has stressed the relationships between people," Rabbi Ehrenkranz said. "He believes you have to value the human being and that everyone counts."

During his Vatican visit, the rabbi had the opportunity to meet Cardinal Francis Arinze, president of the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue and a native of Nigeria.

No sooner had the rabbi returned to Connecticut, he was aboard another international flight, this time to Israel. There, he had a "cordial" meeting with the Grand Mofti of Jerusalem, whom he invited to represent the Muslim people at a CCJU conference in Jerusalem during early February.

"He didn't say yes and he didn't say no," said the CCJU leader, mildly encouraged. ■

Habitat Dedication Slated for Jan. 23

Mark your calendar: Sunday, Jan. 23.

At 2 o'clock that afternoon, the first Habitat for Humanity home being constructed in Bridgeport by the University's campus chapter and two area churches will be dedicated in appropriate ceremonies.

The house, located at 755 Shelton St. on the city's East Side, is being built by a Catholic coalition, "The Community Builders," which consists of the University's Habitat chapter, St. Charles Church of Bridgeport and St. James Church of Stratford. St. Charles is based in the same East Side neighborhood.

Students, faculty and staff, and volunteers from the two churches have put in hundreds of hours over the past four months hammering, sawing and painting the two-story dwelling.

An Associated Press story brought the project statewide attention in October. ■

OPERATION BRIDGEPORT: Eilene Bertsch, assistant vice president for academic affairs, and sophomore Terry Walden share a laugh while dining with youngsters at the St. Charles Urban Center in Bridgeport. They were part of a team of faculty, staff and students who spent the weekend of Nov. 19-20 working with neighborhood community groups as part of the University's ongoing commitment to improving life in the inner-city.

Reaching Out to Bridgeport

HABITAT: Cima Sedigh, an instructor of education, displays her expertise with a power saw at the University's Habitat for Humanity site on Shelton Street in Bridgeport. Dr. Robin McAllister, associate professor of English, has additional lumber in hand, while sophomore Dan Gorton is on the scaffold. The home, which is being constructed by "The Community Builders" – the University's student Habitat chapter, St. Charles Church of Bridgeport and St. James Church of Stratford – will be dedicated on Jan. 23.

Division I Milestones Achieved

A team's first Division I victory would be memorable to many coaches, but Shaun Hannah prefers to look on the season's opening month as a whole.

"From the standpoint of important wins, I don't think we've ever had so many big wins in one month," the Pioneers men's hockey coach said.

After opening the season with a 5-3 loss to Quinnipiac on Oct. 29, Hannah's team notched its first win as a Division I program on Nov. 5 with a 2-1 overtime triumph over the University of Connecticut at Milford Ice Pavilion. The month ended on an equally high note when the Pioneers upended Holy Cross, the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference's defending champion, by a 4-2 score in Worcester, Mass.

In between were notable victories over Army (2-1) and Canisius (5-2), a 3-3 tie with Fairfield, but also losses to MAAC newcomers Mercyhurst (3-2) and Bentley (3-0).

"Against Mercyhurst, we showed we can compete with the best team in the league," said Hannah, adding with a chuckle, "the Bentley game showed we can play with the worst."

Alexis Jutras-Binet, the squad's junior goalie, continues to perform yeoman work, while the line of junior Eric Drake, sophomore Eddy Bourget and senior Paul Adimando has also been a defensive force. Sophomore Peter McRae's switch from wing to defense has been another plus.

"Alexi doesn't have as much work to do as last year, when he averaged 40-45 saves, but he still plays with the same level of intensity," Hannah said.

Offensively, Marty Paquet, a 6-foot-1 freshman wing from St. Catherine, Quebec, is averaging nearly a point a game. Sophomore Lloyd Marks won the Army game with an unassisted goal with just 42 seconds remaining.

For the record, the University's basketball teams also required little time to achieve their first victories as Division I entities.

In the season's third game, the men's squad registered a 65-64 decision over Ivy League member Cornell in the Pitt Center on Nov. 27. Three free throws by junior Mike Sandy in the closing 30 seconds built a four-point lead, which proved vital when Cornell's Derek Kruze sank a three-pointer at the buzzer.

After an opening loss at Hartford, the women's team established a big first-half lead en route to an 82-64 win over Lafayette in the Pitt Center on Nov. 23. ■

Briefly Noted

► Stamford Receives Grant: The Stamford Cultural Development Corp. has awarded a $2,000 grant to the Stamford Campus. According to Stamford Director Pamela Yardis, the grant will fund a program with award-winning artist Helen Zajkowski, in which spouses and children of adult students will create visual art projects that have meaning to them as families and individuals.

► HMSS Candidacy: The University's Human Movement and Sports Science (HMSS) program has been recommended for candidacy status for accreditation by the Commission on the Accreditation of Allied Health Education Programs (CAAHEP). The Joint Review Committee on Educational Programs in Athletic Training made the recommendation to CAAHEP, the accrediting body.

The next step, the accreditation self-study document, is expected to be completed by the faculty during the spring semester and submitted in July 2000.

► Thanksgiving Outreach: Thanks to the generosity of the University community, a donation of $710, three frozen turkeys and four boxes of canned goods was made to the St. Charles Food Pantry in Bridgeport prior to Thanksgiving. The University delivered 90 frozen turkeys on Nov. 23 so that needy families would have a Thanksgiving dinner. The food pantry was able to feed 693 families, its largest number ever.

Another $50, which came in after the deadline, will be used for Christmas food baskets. ■

Week of Service Planned for Students

From Jan. 12-17, Sacred Heart University undergraduate students will have the opportunity to pursue a week of community service and reflection in Bridgeport under a pilot program.

Called CURTIS Week, an acronym for Community Understanding and Reflection Through Inner-city Service, the outreach program will introduce 15 students to the issues of diversity, racism and poverty. The name honors the University's founder, the late Bishop Walter W. Curtis of the Diocese of Bridgeport.

The week will be guided by four student leaders: Angela Bowden, a junior from Greenport, N.Y.; Anne Marie D'Amore, a senior from Port Jefferson, N.Y.; Dan Gorton, a sophomore from Stratford; and Jesse White, a junior from White Plains, N.Y. They were chosen because of their experiences with service and diversity in the Sacred Heart University and Bridgeport communities. ■

Athlete of the Month

Anthony Reynolds, Wrestling

Home: Berlin, Conn.

Class: Freshman

Major: Chemistry

Accomplishments: In his collegiate debut, Reynolds rebounded from a second-round loss in the Colonial Open in Binghamton, N.Y., to twice defeat the number two seed, Dan Deegan of Boston College, and place fifth in the 184-pound class. He followed up by capturing first place in the Doug Parker Invitational at Springfield, Mass., winning all four matches, and then, in the Pioneers' home opener, beating Hofstra's Rob Anspach.

Accomplishments

DR. ANGELA DiPACE, professor of English, presented a paper, "Toni Morrison's Paradise (1990): Patriarchy and 'The Sacrificial Crisis,'" this fall in Baltimore at the eighth International American Women of Color Conference sponsored by Salisbury State University. She presented variations of this work last January in Thailand and this past spring on campus.

DR. MICHELLE LORIS, professor of English, was a participant in two conferences at two Miami, Fla., locations in November. She co-presented a workshop at the International Society for Traumatic Stress Studies conference, which was attended by 1,000 psychiatrists, psychologists and researchers. She also made a clinical case presentation before 400 at the International Society for the Study of Dissociation conference.

DR. EUNSUP "DANIEL" SHIM, associate professor of accounting, presented a paper, "A Cross Sectional Study of the Determinant of Japanese CEO Compensation," at Decision Science Institute's 1999 national meeting on Nov. 22 in New Orleans. The paper was co-authored by Dr. Jooh Lee, chair and professor of management at Rowan University, New Jersey. In addition, Dr. Shim chaired an Accounting Theory and Practices session and discussed a paper at the same meeting.
