

Nineteen Receive Founder's Day Salute

30-year honorees Dr. Paul Siff and Ingrid Wagner receive a captain's chair from President Anthony J. Cernera.

Alvin Clinkscales spoke of "the mission." Michelle Loris, Ph.D., talked about "a seductive place."

But there was a common thread in each of their Founder's Day reflections: Sacred Heart University is a special place.

Clinkscales, now special assistant to the athletic director but for many years director of financial aid, represented the staff, and Loris, a professor of English, was the faculty speaker at the 36th annual Founder's Day program on March 24.

"We believe in our mission, that's why we stay...that's why I stayed," Clinkscales told the assemblage of 450 faculty and staff in the Pitt Center. "The mission provided me with a platform, my fellow workers gave me a foundation. People...an administration that is committed. People...a faculty that is dedicated. People...a staff that is backbone to it all.

"In my 27 years of agitation, frustration and elation at this University," Clinkscales said, "I declare elation the winner by a long shot."

Dr. Loris posed a question that has been asked by others. "Why do so many people dedicate their entire lives so passionately here?" she said.

"I think the best answer was given by a colleague when he was celebrating his own 20th anniversary here. His reply was, 'Sacred Heart is a seductive place. Once you get here you fall in love with the IDEA of the place.'"

In all, 19 faculty and staff were recognized for 35, 30, 25, 20 and 15 years of service during the ceremonies. Collectively, they represented 395 years of employment at the University.

There were two surprises at the end of the program. Thomas V. Forget, Ph.D., interim vice president for academic affairs, announced the creation of "The Anthony J. Cernera Electronic Theological Collection." And President Cernera revealed that Leland Roberts, long-time director of the Music Department, will receive an honorary degree at Commencement.

The collection of theological CD ROM's was presented in honor of Dr. Cernera's 10 years as president, his love of theology and his commitment to the technological advancement of the University. It will be placed in the Ryan-Matura Library.

The honorary doctorate for Roberts represents the culmination of a distinguished career that began at the University in 1966. He and his wife, Monica, coordinator of audio/visual services since 1970, are retiring to Texas at the end of the year. ■

For Bohn, A Banner Occasion

For the first time, an employee with 35 years of service topped the list of honorees on Founder's Day. Douglas J. Bohn, registrar par excellence since 1969 and a faculty member since 1964, was accorded a standing ovation during the 36th annual Founder's Day ceremony on March 24 when he accepted a cap and gown and a University banner from President Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D.

Some would suggest Bohn was destined to spend his working lifetime at the University, but draw your own conclusion.

As a boy growing up in the Wisconsin farming community of Allenton (pop. 300), he attended a two-room schoolhouse operated by the Sisters of St. Francis. The school's name was Sacred Heart.

Fast forward to the early 1960's. Bohn, on the verge of obtaining his bachelor's degree at Marquette University, was discussing job possibilities with his mentor in the math department. A history professor overheard their conversation and wondered if Bohn would consider joining him in the fall at a new Catholic college in Connecticut.

The professor's name was John Mahar. The college was, and is, Sacred Heart University. Mahar and Bohn arrived together.

"When I arrived here in 1964, the University was starting its second year and I was among 35 new faculty," Bohn explains during a rare respite from his duties as registrar. "In those days, the freshmen wore beanies, the boys wore ties, and a prayer was said before each class."

And each and every one of the 623 full-time undergraduates was a commuter.

Bohn taught mathematics in those early years, but at the request of the dean of students, began to assist with the class schedules. "Most faculty were asked to do some administrative work." In 1969, he was appointed registrar; three years later, associate dean was added to his title. And still later, assistant vice president for academic affairs.

"In the beginning, I wasn't certain I would stay in higher education. But I don't think I could have gotten these experiences anywhere else," he says.

"Sacred Heart has been a good place to work. I've had many opportunities to learn, and good mentors. Maurice O'Sullivan. John Croffy. Charlie Ford. Tony Pinciario." Bohn pauses and smiles. "I've enjoyed working with students. I feel gratified when people I taught in 1964 or 1965 come up to me today and thank me for helping them get through mathematics."

Bohn's accomplishments as registrar are too numerous to mention, but he is proud of introducing

As many guessed, Doug Bohn was the subject of the first "Guess Who?" in the inaugural issue.

For University Registrar Douglas J. Bohn, the 36th Founder's Day was a banner day.

computing to the campus in 1980. "It was a Burroughs computer, the first version of a mini-computer that was about the size of my desk," he says.

Far more recently, Bohn and his assistant, Matthew Bielawa, have remained on the cutting edge by placing the class schedules on the web. During the Christmas break, Bohn was in his office installing the Undergraduate Catalog on the web.

If Sacred Heart University has been the defining entity in Bohn's professional life, it has contributed to the richness of his personal life, too. When he met Carole Ann Palo, she was the secretary to the University's first president, William H. Conley, Ph.D. Carole Ann and Doug were married in 1966, and now they have four grown children, four grandchildren and a storehouse of memories. ■

A Closer Look at Founder's Day Honorees

The following remarks were given by members of the University community in recognition of the Founder's Day honorees:

35 YEARS: DOUGLAS J. BOHN — Whether the question pertains to a University policy, a student, a schedule, a faculty member or a University event, we can always count on Mr. Bohn to refresh our memories and provide answers to our queries. In the early days, the University struggled daily with the help and assistance of all of its faculty and staff in forging the dream of a liberal arts University. Thirty-five years later, Douglas Bohn is still offering information and assistance about University policies and enrollment, present whenever you need him and ready to answer any of your questions. Thank you, Doug, for your constant and generous selfless dedication to the University and to all of us who continue to work with you.

30 YEARS: PAUL SIFF, Ph.D. — The sticker reading "Proud to Teach" that has decorated his office for many years is testimony to the spirit of commitment and dedication that Paul brings to his craft. As he has passed on to his students his love of the past and his skills as a professional historian, Paul has also striven mightily to develop their critical thinking, writing and research skills. A master teacher, he is a gifted and versatile scholar: a model of the sort of broad-minded intellectual that we hope our students will become. Knowledgeable in his own field and far beyond it, he has set an example of liberal learning for students and colleagues to follow.

INGRID WAGNER is a dedicated and loyal employee, so much so that it is a struggle to get her to take her vacations.

Even when she does so, she asks if we need her to come in. We say "no."

Meanwhile, the copy machine is spitting out paper like an "I Love Lucy" episode. When Ingrid returns from vacation she says nothing about the mess we've left for her. She somehow makes sense of the half completed jobs, the scribbled, incomplete instructions and gets the copy center back on track. Ingrid is one of the University's unsung heroines and truly deserving of this recognition.

25 YEARS: ROBERTA STAPLES, Ph.D. — Be it Beowulf, the Bard or Ben Johnson who will be the topic of the day, when Dr. Staples enters the classroom, the air is filled with drama, excitement and a call to learning that cannot be ignored. For a quarter of a century,

Roberta has invited her English students to join in the conversation of the academy, and in doing so has raised the bar for them while giving them the supportive safety net of her critiques and instruction. Teacher, colleague, mentor, friend: these are the elements that combine to form Roberta Lynne Staples, a woman about whom Chaucer might have written, "and gladly would [she] learn, and gladly teach."

ALBERT WAKIN has always been more involved than a part-time title might imply. From the early '70's to the present, he has linked more consecutive semesters of teaching at Sacred Heart University than any of the full-time faculty in the Psychology Department. His students tell of his many talents — His professional skills in his delivery... his good humor... the practical, real applications he is able to bring to life... his fairness. Al lives the real spirit of Sacred Heart University.

Connecticut Gov. Thomas J. Meskill (right) joined President Robert Kidera for the celebration of Sacred Heart University's 10th anniversary in March 1973. The governor was the featured speaker and the recipient of an honorary degree.

Robert A. Kidera, Second President, Dies

As president of Sacred Heart University during its early years, Robert A. Kidera subscribed to a "a policy of joy." Those are the words of John Croffy, who was dean of students during the University's first quarter century.

"He wanted to make the school geared to the student. He got along well with the faculty and was instrumental in bringing on board many new faculty with strong credentials," Croffy said.

Kidera, who served as the University's second president from 1971-76, succumbed to a heart attack at the age of 80 on Jan. 30 in Rochester, N.Y. The University celebrated a memorial Mass for him on Feb. 9.

The native of Hartland, Ill., led the institution through five years of growth that were distinguished by the creation of new academic programs, the development of the Cabaret Theatre (forerunner of Bridgeport's Downtown Cabaret Theatre) and the graduation of the first valedictorian — John Friel in 1974 — with a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

During his tenure, Kidera served as president of the Connecticut Conference of Independent Colleges and the Higher Education Center for Urban Studies.

"He put a major emphasis on media, the advertising and promotional aspects of the University," recalled Doug Bohn, registrar since 1969. "He wanted the University to be better known and worked in that direction."

Sacred Heart University was the next-to-last stop in Kidera's 39 years in higher education. He started as a public relations officer in the U.S. Air Force and then spent two years as director of public relations at Carnation Corp.

Finding it difficult to "get excited over a little can of milk," Kidera moved into academia as a journalism professor at his alma mater, Marquette University, where he had received undergraduate and graduate degrees. He later served as an administrator at Cornell and Fordham universities before succeeding William H. Conley, Ph.D., as Sacred Heart University president in 1971.

In 1976, Kidera moved on to become the first male president of Nazareth College in Rochester, N.Y., just two years after the previously all-women's school went coeducational. He retired in 1984.

Kidera grew up on a farm in Cary, Ill., the only one of four brothers who left the small town. He changed the family name, Kvdera, because it was misspelled by so many people.

Survivors include his wife, Helen Kidera, who taught English and speech at the University; three sons, two daughters, a brother and 10 grandchildren. ■

Founder's Day Honorees

BARBARA ZUFFA, Ed.D. — A loyal and dedicated educator who puts her students first, Barbara is a responsive member of the University faculty. A high-energy person, she has directed and guided the satellite campus in the Valley since its inception and has encouraged students from many area workplaces to enroll in degree programs. Her guidance of, and accessibility to, her students has been unfailing. An educator who contributes 100 percent, Dr. Zuffa is a team player who takes pride in her work.

20 YEARS: BABU GEORGE, Ph.D. — A "wall of plaques" in his office, with honors of national scope, speaks to Dr. George's many contributions to the fields of chemistry and science education. Sacred Heart University's own "Mr. Wizard," he has provided countless science outreach opportunities for literally thousands of science teachers and their students. Over the years, Dr. George has been involved in projects that have brought more than $1 million of support to science education in the State of Connecticut. More importantly, he has touched the lives of both his own students and the students of others.

SANDRA HONDA-ADAMS — Four words describe Sandy: Dedicated, Caring, Giving, and Patient. She is so much more than a computer science teacher . . . she is a mentor, a friend, a counselor, a supporter both of her students and colleagues. Her smile and laughter are contagious and her boundless energy is a source of strength for all.

KATHLEEN KINGSTON, Ph.D., can best be described as a quiet, unassuming and intelligent mathematician. A dedicated teacher, she is ever cognizant of the needs of her students, always available for assistance and tutoring. She strives to instill in her students a love and appreciation of mathematics. With diet Pepsi and bagel in hand, Kathy is there when her students need her. Her soft-spoken manner and endless patience have left an indelible impression on many of her students.

ROBIN McALLISTER, Ph.D. — Teacher, thinker, scholar, writer, activist, Robin is a man of grace, of wisdom, of refined sensibilities. A man who harbors an extraordinary commitment to social justice, whether it be witnessing the peace accords on a compesino farm in El Salvador, or teaching English to high school teachers in war-torn Kurdistan. . . . A man of principle, a fighter for just causes, Dr. McAllister reminds us all of what it means to be truly alive and present in the moment.

JUDITH MILLER, Ph.D., is a woman of many parts. A fine mind makes her a keen scholar and English teacher. A warm heart makes her an ideal counselor and colleague. But the image that recurs is of her driving into the University parking lot in early May, her car chock-a-block with the produce of her garden to be sold for scholarship revenue. Cutting by cutting, plant by plant, she has raised thousands of dollars for academically worthy Sacred Heart students — a green thumb indeed!

SISTER ANNE-LOUISE NADEAU makes others feel welcome and comfortable in her presence. As a counselor, she is a great listener and her ability to give advice is unique because she knows how to do so in a caring manner. Her words of encouragement stay with you when you most need them. Those who know Sister Anne find their lives enhanced in a special way. Not only is she a counselor, but she is a dear friend.

JACQUELINE RINALDI, Ph.D. — Equipped with a keen sense of irony and a ready and penetrating wit, Jackie has stood for years as the calm central eye of the hurricane of activity that is the Jandrisevits Learning Center. Whether it's training a group of CLAs, mentoring a faculty tutor or encouraging a dispirited student, Jackie treats all with dignity and with a generosity that includes even those who must struggle to find their voices. Those of us who have known her for 20 years continue to be steadied by her patience, her perspective and her quiet pride in her work.

JULIE SAVINO — A bright and ambitious individual with interpersonal skills that make for a successful person, Julie serves students with the highest standards of professionalism. She uses her creativity and keen insight to provide quality service with distinction and extraordinary capability. Many at the University, but none more than Alvin Clinkscales, are proud to have played a small part in the career of such a dedicated, warm and talented woman. Her contributions and loyalty to Sacred Heart University are to be emulated.

15 YEARS: REBECCA ABBOTT — Media Studies teacher, administrator, researcher and creative artist — always the learner as well as the teacher, whether taking up new fields of advanced study, playing the saxophone, or mastering state-of-the-art videography while making yet another inventive documentary. Becky's commitment to education is a reflection of her ongoing attempt to shape and reshape her own life imaginatively as well as to urge and help others do the same with theirs. A dreamer and a builder, an artist of images, objects and songs, and both passionately and compassionately independent, she is truly one of the University's fine "characters" as well as character-makers.

CLAUDE BARTEL — is one of Sacred Heart's finest adjunct professors. In addition to being a teacher of excellence and versatility, he brings a wealth of real-world knowledge and business experience into the classroom, especially in the area of computer technology and classroom adaptation. He has provided outstanding service to the University.

LAWRENCE FENN, Ph.D. — Nineteen eighty-four was a time of unprecedented growth in the Education Department when the status of education as a political, social and moral issue had just started to change. Dr. Fenn was recruited because of his expertise in many educational administrative areas, including planning, budgeting, personnel management and evaluation. Extending himself on behalf of school children and teachers in his corner of the state, Larry began what is lovingly referred to as Fenn U. or the Lisbon Branch of the University, which now enrolls approximately 250 students.

DOROTHY KIJANKA — As director of the Ryan-Matura Library for the last 15 years, she saw it grow from a repository of books, magazines and microfilm to one that includes all that plus many types of electronic media. While extolling the virtual library, she was always quick to remind that the book is not extinct. This plain-spoken woman from an Illinois farm community has left the library in good shape to become the "virtual library of the future."

RALPH LIM — serves our University with a quiet professionalism. A good teacher, a reliable colleague, a contributor behind the scenes, and a Chartered Financial Analyst. But don't let all this fool you. Imagine instead: an actor, pilot, Yale University Visiting Faculty Fellow, Air Search and Rescue Volunteer, a lover of fine foods — a man with a great sense of humor. We take this opportunity to thank Ralph for his dedication, while not overlooking his charm. ■

Briefly Noted

University to Host Science Conference

Approximately 350 research students and their faculty mentors are expected to attend the 53rd annual Eastern Colleges Science Conference to be hosted by the University on April 23-24. The conference provides a forum for undergraduates to present their research findings in the natural and social sciences. The University will be represented by 30 students and 12 faculty mentors.

Corporate Leader Awarded Degree

Jan R. Carendi, deputy chief executive officer of Skandia Group Worldwide and CEO of American Skandia, is congratulated by President Anthony J. Cernera after being awarded the degree Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa, at a Special Academic Convocation on Feb. 5. Carendi was recognized for his outstanding leadership of Skandia's U.S. operations in Shelton and for his nearly 30 years of success with the Swedish-based company. He also gave the keynote address, "American Skandia – Our First Ten Years."

Accomplishments

BABU GEORGE, Ph.D., chair of the Department of Chemistry/Physics, was part of an American Chemical Society delegation that visited Cuba from Nov. 30-Dec. 5. Dr. George was a presenter at the Cuban Chemical Conference in Havana.

FRANCES GRODZINSKY, Ph.D., professor of computer science, and her husband, Stephen, were co-presenters at a seminar and workshop at the Swinburne University of Technology in Hawthorn, Australia on Oct. 26. "Integrating Ethical Issues Painlessly into any Subjects Without Rewriting the Course" was their topic.

MICHELLE LORIS, Ph.D., professor of English, has organized – and will chair – a panel on African-American Women Writers at the annual Northeast Modern Language Association Conference at Pittsburgh in April.

JENNIFER MATTEL, Ph.D., assistant professor of biology, presented a lecture, "Remnant Forest Conservation: the Function and Value of Urban Forests," at Columbia University on March 24.

RICK MCKINNON, assistant professor of English, was elected to the New England Theater Conference's Board

Babu George, Ph.D., chair of the Department of Chemistry/Physics, is serving as chair of the planning committee, while Shannon Brightman, Ph.D., assistant professor of biology, is the vice chair.

Donations for Colombia

Through a program organized by Campus Ministry, the University community has raised $1,054 to benefit the victims of the Colombian earthquake. The donations came from 21 individuals and Alpha Sigma Psi.

Grant Awarded

Sacred Heart University was among 18 colleges chosen to receive a 1999 Pittsburgh Conference Memorial National College grant for scientific equipment. The $5,896 award will be used to purchase instructional and research lab equipment.

The proposal, submitted by Penny Snetsinger, Ph.D., associate professor of chemistry, was judged by a 14-member committee representing the analytical chemistry and applied spectroscopy technical societies responsible for the program.

And Another Grant

Two College of Arts & Sciences faculty members have been awarded grants from the Connecticut Consortium for of Directors at the group's February meeting in Boston.

CHRISTIAN MORRISON was named Men's Indoor Coach of the Year in the Collegiate Track Conference for the second time as his men's track and field team won the conference's indoor title in February.

CLAIRE PAOLINI, Ph.D., dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, served as coordinator of the 20th annual La Chispa Conference, held at Tulane University in New Orleans in late February. The international refereed conference's focus was on Hispanic language and literature. Dr. Paolini chaired a section, "Unammuno and Ayala."

EDWARD PAPA, Ph.D., associate professor of philosophy, will present a paper, "Augustine and Aristotle's Treatise on Time: A Case Study in the Christian Appropriation of Classical Antiquity," at the 26th annual Richard R. Baker Philosophy Colloquium in Dayton, Ohio on April 13.

DOMENICK PINTO, chair of the Department of Computer Science, made a presentation at the SIGCSE (national computing conference) at New Orleans in March and in April

Heart to Heart

The women's ice hockey team's successes this season weren't limited to wins (15 versus 4 losses and 3 ties). Goalie Anna Alveari (above, with a youngster) and her teammates conducted a public skating session, "Skate Your Heart Out," following their game on Feb. 14. Proceeds went to the American Heart Association.

Long Distance Learning to develop courses to be delivered online. Madan Annavarjula, Ph.D., assistant professor of management, will create an international marketing course, while Jonathan Matte, instructor of mathematics, will develop "Exploring Mathematics Through Literature and Technology." ■ will present at the International Conference on Teaching and Learning, scheduled for Jacksonville, Fla. SANDRA HONDA-ADAMS, associate professor of computer science, and graduate student ART DEGAETANO '98 were co-presenters at the New Orleans workshops.
