Speakers bring breast cancer awareness to Sacred Heart

As part of Breast Cancer Awareness month, a group of Sacred Heart Students gathered in the Schine Auditorium Tuesday night to discuss the realities of breast cancer.

The talk, led by Associate Professor Dr. Pamela K. Levangie, is a breast cancer survivor herself.

The overall message was one of prevention, as this disease can occur in women of any age.

"If you're 20 your chances of developing breast cancer are lower, but not impossible, so you should start checking early."

Answering the Call

A new book by Dr. Ralph Corrigan

News Editor

With a foreword written by Dr. Anthony J. Cernera, President of Sacred Heart University, over 20 pages of pictures of volunteerism in action, and over 100 pages of text of community service from Bridgeport to El Salvador, Mr. Ralph Corrigan, Professor Emeritus, has published a book called ANSWERING THE CALL.

Corrigan traveled to El Salvador three times, the first time being in 1992.

He first came to the University in 1967 as the director of freshman english. Corrigan has taught a wide array of writing courses here at Sacred Heart, from News Writing and Reporting to Creative Writing.

Safewalk begins

Safewalk is a nighttime walking escort service "designed to make people feel more comfortable about walking alone at night,"according to Kerri Casella, UPD Director. "The idea was the key force behind forming this service organization.

Safewalk consists of about seven members who work together to make students feel comfortable and safe on campus. They are located in Hawley Lounge and operate from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. every Thursday through Saturday. If any student has to walk from one place to another on campus alone after 9 p.m., then they can call the hotline and ask for assistance.

A few minutes later a walking team will meet the student at the place they requested. A walking team consists of a male and female student. They are equipped with walkie-talkies that reach safewalk headquarters as well as Public Safety. Walkers are identified by their orange vests, which make them visible at night.

"The service is good for incoming freshmen and all students who may not feel safe walking alone on campus," said Jessica Hommel, a sophomore from Valley Cottage, NY.

"If I was alone I would definitely take advantage of this," Hommel said.

The members of Safewalk are excited to begin operating on Thursday, October 4.

We just want to make this a safer place," said junior Matthew Hales from Union, NJ. For a Safewalk escort call 396-8333.

Up close with University College

Earn up to six credits in seven and a half weeks with the Sacred Heart University College.

The University College offers credit certificate programs in Computer Science, Marketing, and Financial Management that can be applied to a degree program.

The University College, formally known as Continuing Education, is one of Sacred Heart's programs for working professionals and part-time students who want to further their education.

"I feel that the University College and its staff are very helpful in assisting working students such as myself to take the necessary steps needed to complete their degree," said Nicole Swilling, a senior. Swilling has been part of the University College program since 1999.

AHEAD, which stands for Adults in Higher Education working for Accelerated Degrees, offers degrees in Business Administration, Finance, International Business, and General's studies.

Consisting of five seven and a half week sessions, it allows the completion of a degree in half the time of a normal part time program.

Students can earn up to six credits per session. In addition to classes on the Fairfield campus, classes are also offered in Danbury, Derby, Shelton, and Stamford.

The AHEAD program also offers classes at People's Bank for its employees.

"It was so convenient and rewarding," she registered, receive your books, and attend classes right here at the bank.

Jo-Ann D'Amico, a recent graduate of the AHEAD associate degree program and People's bank employee.

Another aspect of UC is the six-year-old distance learning program. Powered by Jones Knowledge software, distance learning is Internet based and allows students to work from home on their PCs. All a prospective student needs is access to the Internet, E-mail, and Microsoft Word or compatible software.

Recently the distance learning program received a grant from the Davis Education Foundation for $37,500, to help improve its quality.

"Through this grant we will be able to improve the quality of the teaching and learning in our already solid online learning program," said Stephen Brown, UC Dean.

One new program that will be offered because of the Davis grant is online tutoring for distance learning students. This will benefit approximately 150 undergraduate and graduate students currently enrolled.

UC currently has approximately 1,150 part-time undergraduate and graduate students currently enrolled. Students enrolled are eligible for $150 book vouchers. A total of forty vouchers are given out per year, with approximately 220 new students enrolled this fall. Students enrolled are eligible for $150 book vouchers.

The importance of self-exams was addressed by each student.

Battling Breast Cancer

Levajanie, "You need to be your own biggest advocate."

Tracy O'Kane, a physical therapy graduate student from Odenton, Maryland found a mass in her breast right before she came back to school for this year.

"I'm 29-years-old and I didn't think that this could happen to me," O'Kane said.

Though this mass is probably cystic, she points to the importance of self-exams. She feels that if she had not performed the exam this lump would probably have gone unnoticed.

The importance of self-exams was addressed by each speaker.

Though this is a disease that attacks far more women, men still have cause for concern.

According to Levajanie, 1500 cases of breast cancer will be reported in men during the year 2001. Additionally, men should be concerned for the women in their lives.

Graduate students, Dave Buck from Little Falls, NJ and Brandos Westfield from Natick, MA, both had mothers who survived this cancer.

Others are not as lucky. Breast cancer is the most common cause of death in women, second only to lung cancer.

Risk factors include high alcohol intake, lack of exercise, consumption of a high-fat diet, and use of hormone replacement therapy.

Additionally, there is much more children than in the strong genetic pre-disposition.

Levajanie mentioned new therapies that could be considered for those who have a parent, grandparent or other members of immediate family with Breast Cancer.

Tamoxifen, a drug that is currently used to prevent Breast Cancer re-occurrence may be used to prevent the initial occurrence of the cancer.

Those wishing for more information about breast cancer need only turn to the web at www.cancer.org or go to www.nabco.org to get a monthly reminder to perform a self breast examination.

Sacred Heart University freshmen recently had their first experience with candidate campaigns, speeches, and voting. Last week, the student government held elections for the Class of 2005.

Campaigning and slogans adorned the halls of the University urging students to cast their ballots for the very best.

Vice-president candidate Victoria Pezzazo created a clever saying so her peers could surely remember her name, "Vote Personal, Vote Proud, Vote Productive, Vote Victoria Pezzazo!"

There were many other campaign statements and enticements that informed the freshmen on their presidential candidates.

Perhaps the most informative event, organized to help the freshmen make the right decision, was the candidate speeches.

On Wednesday afternoon, each candidate declared their promises and read their speeches to an audience in the Mahogany Room. Each nominee described their past leadership roles, and experiences in student government.

Corrigan ‘Answers the Call’

Six Jesuits were murdered at the University of Central America on Thursday, November 16, 1989 after midnight. This sparked active Sacred Heart involvement in the country.

It was decided that SHU would send faculty and administrative delegates to El Salvador. Corrigan asked to write a report about the service he was involved in. After handing in numerous reports, the people who read them decided it would make a wonderful book.

Writing started in May of 2000 and took a little over a year to complete and complete.

Corrigan said, "I worked every day for two or three hours," Corrigan explained.

One chapter in the book, Chapter 3, is entitled, "The Broken Heart Experience."

"Dean Brackley, who is a priest who taught at Fordham, first said this. He meant that if you walk with the poor and listen to their stories, you will have your heart broken. This will put you in a place where you will want to do as much good as you can," Corrigan explained.

From working here at Sacred Heart for 33 years, Corrigan saw a lot of changes in the school.

"Dr. Cemera's arrival at Sacred Heart was the most significant thing that happened in the University's history," Corrigan said. "He changed it from a commuter to a comprehensive University."

Community service has always been a priority at Sacred Heart.

The El Salvador involvement sparked a lot of other organizations here at Sacred Heart.

Freshman Week, also known as Community Connections, and Curtis Week are both direct outgrowths of El Salvador.

"When fraternities and sororities were approved, they could not be approved simply as social organizations. They all had to show the group providing some kind of service to the community," said Doug Bohn, as quoted in this book.

"He was one of the early leaders in developing community service at the University. Today it is an integral part of our mission and life as a Catholic University," said Dr. Cemera.

Corrigan himself was not always involved in community service. He always wanted to get involved; the idea of doing good deeds always kept him in mind.

But ever since El Salvador, he has been true to the community service cause.

Sidney Gottlieb, who was a major force in the printing of Corrigan's book, said, "Working with Ralph is one of my greatest experiences and pleasures in all my 26 years! I have always been amazed at how much Ralph accomplishes on all levels: in his classes, working individually with students, and in his involvement with the programs detailed in his book."

Answering the Call is available to buy for $14.95. All the proceeds go to service programs at the University.

Among the topics that were presented.

"I am challenging myself to take the initiative for my life and the Class of 2005. I hope to unite us and to do my best to get what you want," Presidential candidate Michael Haynes said.

He completed his speech with a humorous tone, joking, "Vote for the right man, not the wrong guy."

This resulted in laughter from the audience, who understood that this comment was in reference to the final presidential candidate, Guy Savage.

"I am a people person," he assured. Then after requesting everyone in the room to stand up and finally sit down, Savage concluded, "I get things done."

Following the speeches, the candidates congratulated each other, while members of the freshmen class were encouraged to cast their ballots.

On Thursday evening the votes were tallied and it was announced that Guy Savage had won the first student government election for the Class of 2005, and would be this year's President.

Others who won include: Chad Rechczyk, vice-president; and Teresa Mondelli, treasurer.

Patriotic pins on the way

The student government executive board has ordered patriotic pins in honor of the September 11 tragedy. All proceeds will go to the Red Cross. Pins will be on sale after Columbus Day Weekend.

Tree dedication in the works

The student government executive board is working with Dr. Anthony Cemera, President of Sacred Heart University, and Buildings and Grounds to have a tree dedication in honor of the September 11 tragedy.

Senior class trip

The senior class trip to Foxwoods is planned for October 29.

Senior Class Trip to Foxwoods will take place from Public Safety at 7:45 p.m. You must be a senior to attend, but you do not have to be 21 years old. There are many things to do at Foxwoods that do not require that you be 21.

More information will be posted in upcoming Spectrum issues.

Lecture series comes to SHU

Three guest speakers are scheduled to come to Sacred Heart to talk about ethical issues. These lectures will start on Wednesday, October 10 (in the Faculty Lounge), then follow on Monday, October 22, and end on Thursday, November 1 (the latter two will take place in the Schine auditorium). The topics to be discussed include artificial intelligence, animal rights, and the unborn human fetus.

Library closed for three days

The Ryan-Matura Library will be closed from Saturday, October 6 through Monday, October 8. The reason for the closure is because of the installation of new carpeting and the Columbus Day Holiday.

The assertion was made by one, as many do. "That charity should become a part of human nature." Is this true and if so why? Has the author of these statements genuinely reflected upon what charity really is and if so will charity in fact benefit humanity?

Subsequently, I now ask this expert on charity, what is the difference between giving a homeless man a dollar and donating a dollar to the victims of the World Trade Center bombing? This question needs to be solved if one claims they know what charity is. To start, the cause of this man's homelessness was originally due to an external force that overwhelmed the individual. Nevertheless, through many different interrelated events this person has produced a state of homelessness because of their lack of responsibility and ownership over their life. This second part of that movement is what separates a homeless man from the ensuing situation. Furthermore this situation is categorized as vice for it is impeding and preventing this person from actualizing their natural capacities. Thus this static state has been created and perpetuated by the homeless man through his lack of effort and action.

Now in opposition to that state of homelessness is the catastrophic event, which took place on September 11, which left many in need of support and assistance. This was an event in which an uncontrollable force employed its will over these people thus making them powerless and consequently victims. As a result this event warrants ones assistance and or charity for these people had no part in producing this event. Furthermore to elucidate my point if these victims continue to ask for assistance continual over time they should be denied because the event is over and they, like the homeless man, have allowed their vices to rule themselves therefore creating an unhealthy state. Henceforth, the importance of this understanding lies in the distinction between charity as a static state, homelessness, and an event, World Trade Center bombing. In addition you are rewarding a homeless man for his vices when you provide him with charity. Inevitably a developed state of charitable acts reinforcing ones vices will lead to a breakdown in our society and birth of many greater disorders. Now if this is what needs to be done for one to do their part, then I will thoughtfully decline.

An intellect's judgement

That is just your opinion.
"Different people have different opinions." Who am I to judge?

These are three classic examples of relativistic assertions. Relativism by definition is the de-valuing of values in a lack of judgement and investigation. When one reduces another to, "just their opinion" they are neither listening to the other nor engaging their mind. In this movement is an underlying theme that our American Culture is beginning to harbor, laziness and ignorance. "You have your opinion, and mine, as long as you don't infringe on me I won't infringe on you."

Now let us take this disease and bring it to a more concrete example, the tragic September 11th suicide bombing of the W.T.C. Let me hypothetically ask the relativist now if what the actions that were done were unjust or wrong. "I think its wrong but, they grew up in a different culture and, who am I to judge?" Well, it is in this assertion that a conclusion can be made which is both valid and credible. A relativist is no different than the men who did these terrible acts against our country. Why you ask? Well, these men were dogmatic, not interested in investigation, and not willing to establish effort in exchanging ideas. This you see is the root of a larger issue, not their motive, not their justifications, the lack of intellectual effort. Consequently, this underlying problem is capable of becoming a "21st Century Chimera." If we do not start thinking, engaging our minds, letting down our egos and starting up our conversations now, we will eventually lead to a bunch of selves in a foundationless society. If this subjective chaotic wave occurs and if we continue to de-moralize, de-humanize and yes, kill thousands and thousands of innocent people cause we "know" we are right we will become the next civilization to end and you cannot tell me otherwise because that is just your opinion.

The chance of a lifetime: The Luxembourg Program

By Alexis Dione
Contributing Writer

I'm finally a senior this year, yet the school day is different to me. I spent three years as a resident (South Hall, East Hall, then Parkridge), but this year, I'm living on campus. My hometown of Branford, CT. Only thirty minutes away, I looked forward to living off-campus. Now that I am a few weeks into the school year, I am beginning to doubt my decision. Among all students who have cars, my mornings usually begin with a fight for a parking spot in North Lot. Although I am a commuter, and I have my trusty red decal, I know not to bother with the Commuter Lot because that seems to fill up with every single one but commuters sometime around sunrise.

Stressing so much about the constant hassle, I went so far as to speak with a Public Safety Officer who was distributing decals. I asked him if they were going to be available more than once (like senior commuters and East Hall residents) have them and park in places other than North Lot. If the school cannot solve the parking problem immediately, then maybe they should not allow so many students to have cars at all. And for those who do have cars, the least I can ask is to have enough spots in the lots that you are not permitted. Somehow Sacred Heart will solve many of its problems, and I hope the parking gets put on a high priority list.

Aimie Likens
Commuter student

I decided to attend the first Commuter Council meeting of the year. The topic of discussion: lack of parking. Relieved to know that I wasn't the only unhappy student, Jill Ahearn, President, added emphatically: "Parking is a BIG problem!" Everyone expressed their own inconveniences, and I was especially upset about the story that a student named David Harman shared. He came to school one afternoon around 12:30 p.m. and when he circled campus and found no spots in any of the lots, he was permitted to park in, he was forced to park at the Trumbull Mall and walk back to campus. Incidents like this are ridiculous and intolerable.

As a commuter I feel that I should be entitled to a parking spot in the lot that is designated for me. I do not have a choice if I want to access the Commuter Lot who did not have decals, and he replied, "Only if it is out of control... like people parked along the curb." When I asked him if I was OK in a regular spot without a decal, I was told that was fine. So basically that incident makes me feel that the commute privileges I have means nothing to the school. If decals are necessary then they should also be enforced. Public Safety gives out decals only to those who are residents. I don't know if the demand for decals is smaller than Rhode Island by two square miles.

I was ecstatic to have the opportunity to spend four months in a foreign country. A new language, a new culture, a new way of life. Arriving at Logan Airport on January 15, many emotions were running through my head.

Not only was I completely excited, I was also completely nervous. These were my first few days at home for the weekend if I caught the flight. It was all me, on my own, in the real world, and this was it, this was it. I certainly promised not to speak English in Luxembourg.

In Luxembourg they speak French, German and Luxembourgish. We attempted to break the language barrier by taking French class. Because of the ideal location of Luxembourg, right in the heart of Europe, there was plenty of opportunity to practice. The group of ten students and Dr. Gold went to Trier, Germany for a day, which was just over the border.

We went to the Karl Marx house, and took a weekend trip to Paris. We went to the Eiffel Tower, Lourdes, the Louvre and more. We went to Bastogne, Belgium, where the Battle of the Bulge took place. We also spent a week in a tiny town called Neubach, Germany. We also had plenty of time to travel on their own. I spent a week in London and Cambridge, England. I spent a few days in Berlin, Germany. I also had the chance to go to Poland for Easter and I visited Auschwitz while I was there. That was a surreal experience and I wish I had taken more pictures. After seeing the Tatra Mountains in southern Poland, my friend drove me across the borders of the Czech Republic as we waited for the bus.

Other travel destinations included Portugal, Italy, Spain, Switzerland, other parts of France, and Austria. The group also visited the Vatican. Dr. Gold also arranged many field trips for us. Luxembourg is a member of the European Union, and the purpose of the buildings are located there. We visited the European Parliament and the European Commission. We also went to the US Embassy, the EU Commission, Luxembourg, and had tea with the officials there.

We made ourselves feel quite at home at Sparky's, an internet cafe. Sparky's was also one of the only places where I could speak English without being looked at.

Back to Sacred Heart University for the fall semester of 2001; where new students are filling up every empty spot in the day. Being introduced to a totally new atmosphere; where individualism and responsibility are influenced, these pupils are placed where most of them have never been before, almost all of them dream of, and some are petrified of. This community, led by the president (Dr. Gold) and the provost (Anthony Cernera), sets his standards high for hope of building a well-rounded community of students.

The university's mission statement, which its primary focus is to assist in the development of people who are knowledgeable of self, rooted in faith, educated in mind, compassionate in heart, responsive to social and civic obligations, and who are expected to regard an ever-changing world, I find myself questioning this initial premise. Does the university reject those who are not all of those things? Some may enter into this higher co-educational institution; for stated previously, this university "assists in the development of people who are knowledgeable of self...rooted in faith"...? Basically, the school is so exclusive and prestigious that it only accept students who are so intellectually developed that they are knowledgeable of themselves, rooted in faith, educated in mind; at the young age of 17, even prior to entry of college!

Why is it that old folks are known as wise men? Then, they come to Fairfield, Connecticut. "Students" are now realize to themselves only, why is the stipulation of helping poor people (who made the choice to be and stay poor) thrown in the equation as if it is a condition one has to do abide by to realize their personal worth? So one's worth lies conditionally outside of oneself, and only realized by actions of which they do for others? I think I am starting to understand the Catholic perspective. I guess Tom Hank's survival instincts on that deserted island in Castaway did not portray any individual worth; considering no one was around to validate him by allowing him to give to them. Also, would a world of choices put a religious stipulation on how to find personal worth?

The reason for writing this critique is in representation of the intelligent students in this community, all of them from what this mission statement says; and would like a response from the higher spokesperson on what flaws that have been pointed out. Take this as a cry for help; the students need the wisdom of these higher folks to assist them in the choosing this is not a contradiction through over-inflated language; keep it honest and truthful, for that is what students need to know.

Mission statement crossroad
The University Choir and the SHU Show Choir, graced the stage at numerous performances last year.

Want to raise your IQ ten points?

Join a choir.

"Music engages the mind in a whole different way. It re-aligns the thinking process in the brain, and at the same time, it helps to re-organize," said Patricia Smith, Music Coordinator at SHU.

"Students who have been involved in music throughout their high school years have showed a 5% increase in the size of the brain. Some students have scored 35 points higher on their SAT scores," said Smith. Smith also explained the Mozart Effect, a phenomenon that describes the brain's ability to retain more information from studying while listening to classical music.

Smith said, "The most important benefit of music is that we can use it in the outside world. When we begin our job search upon graduation, we can use our 'critical thinking' skills which we have obtained from studying, reading and playing music."

Besides stimulation of the brain, music may reduce stress, build confidence, and provide an opportunity to showcase vocal talent.

Regina Dempsey, a sophomore member of the Show Choir said, "Being in the choir allows me to clear my mind. It's a great way to reduce stress."

Dempsey is looking forward to an upcoming show, the Music of Stephen Sondheim, which is a collaboration of show tunes from West Side Story and Sweeney Todd. The performance will be held on December 8th.

Students at SHU have the option of joining the University Choir or the Show Choir.

Smith explained the difference between the two. "The University Choir sings classical choral music on the risers like the big choirs that sing with orchestras. The Show Choir is a song and dance troupe that performs on a stage singing and dancing the music from musical shows - much like taking the drama away from a musical and leaving the big musical numbers," said Smith.

SHU is one of the first universities to offer a show choir on the East Coast. The music program began with three members and has grown to 560. Show choir currently consists of 30 members and University Choir consists of 60 members. Smith acknowledges the rapid growth as "quite an accomplishment for such a short period of time."

Brett Wallace, a sophomore and business major who is in Show Choir and University Choir said, "I have always had a passion for the theater and I look forward to participating in the shows. My favorite show last year was Tribute to America - we did some swing dancing. It was great."

Smith has been on staff at SHU for over a year and many may think she has performed miracles with the music program.

Smith's enthusiasm may be a contagious quality that continues to attract students to the program.

Though Smith has accomplished much with the program, she has new goals. Smith hopes to see the institution of a vocal/jazz group, lectures by guest artists, and ultimately the establishment of music as an academic major at SHU.

The University Choir is performing a Christmas concert on Dec. 9th (including the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah"). The concert will be an annual event; alumni, faculty, and guests will be asked to join in singing of the Hallelujah Chorus as a tradition at Christmas.

The choir will also be performing at the President's Society Dinner held at the Woodland Country Club in Darien on Dec. 1. The dinner is for individuals who have made substantial contributions to the University.

Both choirs are open to full-time students and all are encouraged to participate.
What's all the rave about?

By Ryan Greenfeld
Staff Writer

Ecstasy, Special K, Coke, and Acid. These are just a few of the drug buzzwords that people associate with raves. People forget that drugs are not just at raves, but also everywhere. Music and dance is the essence of raves.

Yes, some people do drugs at these events but some people do drugs everyday and everywhere around the world. Substance abuse can be found in every walk of life, every community and in every group or at any event.

Why stereotype people because they like non-conventional music or because they do not dress in the cookie-cutter fashion of the majority?

Brett Wallace is a sophomore at Sacred Heart who considers himself to be a party kid, a description used to identify Ravers.

Wallace has been in the rave scene only a year but already is dedicated to it. Wallace is a member of the Alpha Sigma Psi fraternity, the SHU show choir, and a member of the SHU Players.

"We are just people from all around who bond with music," explained Wallace. "People don't understand what Ravers are. We are not all drug abusing druggies."

"I know a lot of people who are straight edged. People don't want their kids to go [to raves] because they think of all the drugs and everything. Well, if that's the case, parents shouldn't send their kids to college. There are more drugs there!"

Many people in society say they enjoy all types of music, and the music heard at a rave has much more diversity because it has a live DJ at least every hour.

The disc jockeys have so much enthusiasm about their music that the crowd is moved to interpret each DJ's special blend of music through their own dance movements.

An example of this enjoyment for music was seen and experienced at Sacred Heart on Monday at the Pitt Center when the "Battle of the Beats" was held. At this event, a very diverse crowd was united through a shared love of music.

Some music played that night was a form of "techno," called house music. Joe Sousa, a freshman from Rhode Island, attended the event.

Sousa has been in the rave scene since he was fifteen years old. He is an associate member of the fraternity, Omicron Phi Kappa.

"Everyone is out for the same thing: to have a good time," said Sousa.

"Music is food for the soul. It is an expression of the self, in whichever form it might be, either as a DJ or a dancer with glow sticks."

It is known that for every up, there is a down and, yes, the downfall to this scene is the abuse of drugs. However, it has not always been like that.

"Ravers in the scene for a couple of years have seen it change for the worse, and younger kids are coming in mostly for the drugs. No one is asked to conform to a dress code either, in comparison to a club," said Wallace.

"Raves bring together young people in a comfortable environment where they can be anything they want to be... it is the music that connects!" - Junior Matt Mulvey, Bloomfield, N.J.

WARNING: You may turn into a Potato Head

By Keysha Whitaker
Features Editor

Do you remember the old childhood game, Mr. Potato Head? Remember playing with a hard plastic potato with a bunch of holes in it for pegged facial features?

You could make Mr. Potato Head's face look anyway you liked: eyes on top of the head, ears where the nose should be, mouth on the side of the head, shoe for an eye - it was the most hilarious sight.

Look at silly Mr. Potato Head. You'd laugh for a few moments, then take all the pieces off Mr. Potato Head and start all over, preparing yourself for the grand finale when you're finished, glue the pieces and end the game.

But it never seemed like anyone ever won at the game; Mr. Potato Head was just passed around until people got tired of playing.

The pieces off Mr. Potato Head and start all over, putting our noses in the wrong places.

And in the end, we're not laughing; we're often sad because we feel empty and out of place, since our "face," our identity, has been created for us and is distorted.

You can't see if your eyes are on top of your head, yet we continue to allow ourselves to stumble around like confused Mr. Potato Heads, for whatever reasons.

Take some time out and think about whether you're being used as a Potato Head.

If you are aware of the way people rearrange you, you will be more equipped to prevent it from damaging your personality and from reoccurring in the future.

Once you decide where you want your eyes and nose to be, place them there. And when you're finished, glue the pieces and end the game. This time, Mr. Potato Head finally wins.

ESSAY CONTEST 2002

The Elie Wiesel Prize in Ethics

SUGGESTED TOPICS

Why are we here? How are we to meet our ethical obligations? Reflect on the most profound moral dilemma you have encountered and what it has taught you about ethics.

What ethical issue concerns you most and what concrete proposals would you make to deal with it?

"Serendipity" Releases It's Magical Presence to Movie Theaters This Weekend

By John Ruggiero
A & E Editor

I think it's amazing how you wait all summer long for the best film to come out and then it hits you in early fall. That happened to me with "Serendipity." I am a huge John Cusak fan, so I saw the trailer for this film back in May and it had a release date that said the film was to come out in mid-August.

Unfortunately, I waited all summer long for this movie to come out only to be greatly disap­appointed. I was disappointed that most movies I viewed this summer weren't that good, and I was disappointed because I couldn't wait to see the film.

Then, all of a sudden, a late September commercial shows that "Serendipity" is coming out in early October. Lucky for me I caught a sneak preview last weekend.

I had a feeling that out of the two Cusak films that were coming but in recent months that this would be the best of the two. Not saying anything bad about "America's Sweethearts," because I enjoyed the film greatly, but there was just something special about this movie, hence the title, "Serendipity."

The film stars Cusak and Kate Beckinsale, who you might remember as the female lead in "Pearl Harbor."

Beckinsale is amazingly fantast­ic and loveable as the charac­ter Sara Thomas. Both Cusak and Beckinsale meet awk­wardly in a New York department store around Christmas 1991 and have a fantastic day out on the town. As fate would have it both seemed to lose one another in a New York minute, so-to­speak, and the two went along their merry ways not to see each other for nearly a decade.

Ten years later, they still have constant reminders of one another passing in and out of their lives. Both put aside their current situations and "engagements" to other people to go after one another. But Beckinsale, who lives now in San Francisco, and Cusak who still lives in New York, find trouble making contact along the way.

Trouble in that its nearly impossible to find someone whose number you do not possess and whose last name you do not know.

But that's why they call this film "Serendipity" because the film is nothing short of magical. The movie also has an amazing supporting cast that includes Molly Shannon, formerly of Saturday Night Live, as well as Jeremy Piven who has been in so much lately. I most remember him for "PCLI." There's also a cameo from Eugene Levy, who you would remember from the "American Pie" films.

"Serendipity" is directed by Peter Chelsom, who uses the beautiful New York atmosphere and romantic snowy weather to make the film a major success. Also written by Marc Klein, who helped write the 1995 hit film "While You Were Sleeping" starring Sandra Bullock.

What more can I say about this film than it’s the best I've seen in a long time. To be a true winner a film needs to click on all cylinders, and this one definitely does.

Casus and Beckinsale bring humor and romance to "Serendipity"
Behind the Scenes at WHRT: Chris Economy's New Sound

By Kathleen Haughey
Contributing Writer

While the average Sacred Heart student may have just heard in passing "Hooligan's Holiday," the radio show hosted by Chris Economy, they probably have heard more than just a passing comment about the band that is the inspiration for the shows title.

While Motley Crue, the author of "Hooligan's Holiday," may not be a common fixture on the radio or hallways of SHU, they are a prominent influence in the life of Chris Economy, a senior from Red Bank, New Jersey.

For 20 years, Motley Crue has been selling out stadiums with their constant effort of redefining themselves, always coming up with something new and better. In a similar fashion, Economy is always finding a new way to do what he loves, to work in the field of entertainment. At a young age, Economy longed to be a rock star, but without the ability to sing or play an instrument, he decided the best road for him would be to present to others the wonders of music. In his four years here at SHU, Economy has chosen to pursue the field of Media Studies and work at WHRT. He has hosted his own show since his freshman year and can be heard Wednesday afternoons, 1 to 3 p.m. Through his show, he is trying to bring his fervor for the electric to the halls of SHU.

This year, Economy will have a larger hand in bringing new music to the station. He was chosen to be the manager of WHRT. Economy's first act of business at the station was to contact the College Music Journal. Since last year, SHU has been receiving funding from the FCC, which supplies college radio stations with music courtesy of the CMJ. However, approximately 70% of the music they have supplied Economy has labeled as "crap." On his show, he started "The E List," (the Economy list) comprised of CD's containing brand new music, such as singles that are new to radio as a whole, not just college radio. The list also contains obscure new music, some from bands that are signed to major labels and not necessarily played on the radio yet, or local bands that have yet to be signed by a record label.

Through the list, Economy is trying to mix up the sound of not only his show on WHRT, but the music that the station plays as a whole. Economy wants the station to get back to its roots, by having more of a typical "college" sound. By that, Economy means that he wants to expose SHU students to the music that they couldn't really hear if they just turned on any radio station. He wants more of an unconventional sound. He is always more than willing to take suggestions. "I'll try anything as long as it's not obscene, and as long as it's not crap," said Economy.

Economy also wants the radio station to be able to expand its audience. This year, with the help of a new receiver activated on the top of Curtis Hall, it is able to reach all campus housing. The WHRT staff is trying to obtain another receiver to put on top of East Hall, one of the largest buildings in Bridgeport, in order to possibly reach as far as Avalon Gates.

In the years to come, Chris Economy wants to journey into the field of television music, saying that he'd rather be a VJ, than a DJ. He sees better opportunity on TV where he can be animated and "jazz things up" and appeal to the audience's eyes, as well as their ears.

"Hearts in Atlantis" Combines Mystery and Humanity

By Erik Hanson
Contributing Writer

The adaptation of Stephen King's "Hearts In Atlantis" makes the transition from page to screen wonderfully. It combines a level of humanity that was lacking in the summer films, with a level of mystery to produce a film that is the inspiration for the shows title.

The story chronicles Bobby Garfield, an 11 year old boy, who is simply infatuated with a bike he cannot afford. His mother adopts an approach to life-the glass is half empty-by blaming their shortcomings from the father that died six years ago. While at the same time leaving a number of debts due to his gambling habits.

Bobby's summer continues to disappoint when he receives a library card instead of the bike he wanted for his birthday. Until Ted Brautigan played by Anthony Hopkins, moves into an apartment above Garfields'.

Brautigan is a man of mystery, and he has a psychic ability to read minds and suggests Bobby help him out with a problem. The problem is Ted is on lookout for the low man in top hats that are after him for reasons I'd rather not divulge. Bobby notices when spending time with Ted that he falls into lapses and spells and loses all awareness. Bobby starts to worry for his safety and realizes that Ted's gifts of mystery and psyche may be passed by simple contact.

Finally during the film Bobby stands up to his mother, and rightfully so, seeing that she is to blame for everything bad that happens to them along the way.

We come to learn that ted may not be on hot pursuit by you-know-who and Bobby prevents Ted from learning knowledge based on his desire to just keep Ted around. "Hearts in Atlantis" is directed by Scott Hicks of "Shine."

The film hits you right in your heart, no pun intended, to make us realize how important relationships are. As well as how the past reflects who we will become. The past does not come back to haunt us, but simply reminds us of a moment when we were happiest.

White squad tops red in annual SHU men’s ice hockey exhibition

Compiled By Keri Blair
Sports Editor

This past Saturday the men’s ice hockey team played its annual “Red-White” scrimmage at the Milford Ice Pavilion. The White team defeated the Red team 6-2 despite being out-shot 37-32.

White took the pace early, when junior Rich Naumann (Boerne, TX) scored unassisted less than a minute into the game. White monopolized the scoring in the first period with two more goals by junior Chris Affinati (Highland Park, IL) and Nick Mutchler (Hamden).

First period goalkeepers, White’s Kevin LaPointe (Quebec City, PQ) and Red’s Eddy Ferhi (Charenton, France) saved 8/8 and 4/7 shots, respectively.

Senior Paul Sposito (Wethersfield) added another for White in the second period.

Red then sent two goals past John Alvino from junior Bryan Rechcygl (Pawask, WI) and sophomore Mike Billacos. Sophomore Phil Denema scored White’s fifth goal of the game to put the score at 5-2 going into the third period.

Freshman Chad Rechcygl (Pawask, WI) was able to stop 13 out of White’s 15 shots in the second period.

Third-period action saw some shooting, but little scoring. Nutcher scored his second goal of the game, getting one past freshman Bryan Fogle, who went on to save 14 shots that period.

Sophomore Jon Fahren stopped all 10 shots he saw as White’s third-period goalkeeper.

Head coach Shaun Hannah enters his sixth season. In 1999-2000 he was voted MAAC Coach of the Year and was a finalist for the Spencer T. Penrose Memorial Award as NCAA Division I National Coach of the Year.

Hannah expects SHU to challenge for this seasons MAAC championship.

The teams 2000-01 record is 14-12-5 (10-2-2 home, 4-0-3 away). SHU finished tied for fifth place in the MAAC with a record of 11-10-5. The offense will be lead by senior Chris Mokos (Lincoln Park, N.J.), senior captain Lloyd Marks (Syndenham, Ont.) all of which had 26 points last season.

As a freshman, Paquet set school records with 18 goals and 40 points and was named MAAC Offensive Rookie of the Year.

Defensively, the team will look to junior Les Hrapchak (Wakaw, SK), senior captain Pete McRae, and Nutcher.

Returning goalie Ferhi is coming off a season in which he established a SHU record with a 2.40 goals-against average while logging 677 saves.

The team continues their pre-season play this Sunday at 5 p.m. at the Milford Ice Pavilion where they will meet McGill University in an exhibition game.

SHU Athlete of the Week
Konsig has 18 saves and three shutout victories against conference opponents last week

The Northeast Conference tabbed Leslie Konsig, goalkeeper for the Sacred Heart University Women’s Soccer team, Player of the Week for her 18 saves and three shutout victories against conference opponents last week.

The Millburn, NJ native recorded four saves in a 3-0 win over Fairleigh Dickinson, 10 saves in a 1-0 victory against St. Francis (PA) and four saves in a 1-0 win over Robert Morris.

“I think Leslie is the best keeper in the NEC. She is an outstanding athlete who plays part-time soccer as she is on a softball scholarship,” stated head coach Joe Barroso.

Last season, Konsig was named to the all NEC second team for her 63 saves, 1.00 GAA and 6 shutouts on the year. She currently has 68 saves, a 1.11 GAA and five shutouts this season.

The 5-8 sophomore was also selected as the NEC Rookie of the Week last year during the week of Oct. 2.

Barroso felt it was important for people to know that Konsig is not only good on the field, but off the field.

“She is good to be around, her teammates love to be around her,” said Barroso.

Despite a 0-4 start to the season, the Pioneers (5-4-0, 5-0 NEC) are currently on a 5-0 win streak, good for first place in the NEC title.

The Pioneers are more than halfway through the season when eight matches left, which Konsig and her teammates have their eyes set on being the first team in SHU history to take home the NEC title.

“I’m just another lacrosse player,” said Danny Geiger. When Danny stepped foot on Sacred Heart University’s campus this fall he may have thought that he was just an ordinary freshman, though he is far from it. The 19-year-old, Long Island native is a member of the men’s lacrosse team, however he is quite different from the rest of the team in his own special way. Danny has been deaf since birth.

When Danny was old enough, he was enrolled at a special school for the deaf from kindergarten to sixth grade but he did not enjoy going to school. “When you go to a deaf school, you tend to focus on being deaf all the time. Being in school, you tend to focus on learning as much as you can,” said Geiger. Danny then made the transition to William Floyd High School and was an impact player on its varsity lacrosse team.

Danny said that while deafness has made it tough to play lacrosse, his most demanding challenge is in the classroom where he learns with the aid of an interpreter. Two of Danny’s teachers e-mail him a set of notes for each class but for the otherwise sole relies on the information conveyed to him through his interpreter.

Danny said that being deaf is trying but he is learning to communicate and understand things. Learning as well as reading was very hard so he decided to have Cochlea Implant installed. To have this implant put in, Danny had to undergo a dangerous major operation that required cutting through his skull.

Wires with 24 different frequency channels that allow Danny to decipher sound were implanted in his cochlea, which is the part of the ear that enables a person to interpret sounds. With this implant, Danny can now hear everyday things like his name, a doorbell, some music and a car horn.

Danny said “It was strange to hear for the first time and it gave me a terrible headache but I’ve since gotten used to it.” Where Danny is most comfortable, however is on the lacrosse field. “I live for lacrosse,” said Geiger.

He was first introduced to the sport by his father, who took him to see the professional New York Saints play. Danny immediately fell in love with the sport and has been playing ever since.

When he was younger, it was a regular occurrence to see him sleeping with his lacrosse stick in his hands. Seven years later Danny decided to come to SHU. Danny said that lacrosse here at SHU is “wonderful.” He said that his visit to Sacred Heart was great and all the people made him feel very welcome. “I felt very secure and at ease here.”

“Danny has had a huge impact on his teammates, some of whom have learned sign language so that they can communicate to him,” said Dan DeVoe, a junior midfielder. “Danny has really inspired me. When I see him working so hard it makes me want to work just as hard. I want to learn how to sign because he’s a great kid and I want to get to know him better.”

Danny is not an average freshman at Sacred Heart, though not for reasons that you may think. Danny has overcome great adversity and taken on huge challenges to get here. He refuses to let his disability get the best of him in the classroom or on the field. No matter how ordinary he may think he is, Danny will always be extraordinary to those around him.

“Danny has had a huge influence on the team. He brings a great attitude to practice everyday and he’s a pleasure to coach.”

Danny has been playing lacrosse on his high school team, the Eastport South Manor. Danny is a great player and has been that way to many of the dancers on the SHU Dance Team.

Dance team still has the right moves

By Tayanna Rocourt Contributing Writer

“Dance isn’t a form it’s a way of life.” This is a quote that many of the dancers on the SHU Dance Team can relate to. To these girls, dance is everything and has been that way to many even before they became a dancer on the team at SHU.

If you have been pass the studio at the Pitt Center, you will always see twenty-two girls dancing and practicing hard to perfect their moves and techniques.

Last spring, they got the opportunity to qualify to go to Daytona, Florida and compete in Nationals twice. Before school ended last year, they held try-outs and got thirteen new dancers to the team, each bringing a great deal of talent to the team.

As the year began, the girls have been practicing way before school was underway. They came to school early and had an intense pre-season schedule that started early in the morning and ran till night time.

“Practice is so important because not only do we need to connect with the music, but as a team,” stated Jessica Field, dancer on the team.

During pre-season, the dance team was notified that they has to opportunity to be the Spirit Team for the Major League Lacrosse Championship Game, which was held and televised in Bridgeport this year. The girls performed at the Championship game, and helped get the crowd pumping by handing out tee shirts and holding crowd games throughout the night.

The dancers will be performing at the first home football game this Saturday. They will be dancing to the same dance they performed at the MLL game.

They are continuing to work on new routines, and keep on practicing their techniques to start preparing themselves for competitions in the future. Even though Nationals are not until April, the girls start early to prepare themselves for the tough competition that they will be getting from Florida.

The team has begun to start fundraising for this trip due to the amount of money it will cost to send the team. They would like to thank everyone for their continued support.

They ask that you support their annual Service Auction on Oct. 24 in the Old Gym. As Albert Einstein once said, “Dancers are the athletes of God.” The girls just want to show the nation what the SHU dancers have got.
