From the Editors

As we begin our seventh year of publication, we are pleased to make two announcements.

The Editorial Staff has been enlarged to include Joseph Levangie, a successful entrepreneur and angel investor living in Bedford, Massachusetts. Adding Levangie to the staff will provide an experienced hand in “real-world” entrepreneurship activity. He wrote the Journal’s first “Practitioner’s Corner” article in our last issue and this will now become a permanent outlet for Levangie’s wisdom and insights. Welcome, Joe!

The Journal is also pleased to announce a Special Issue for Spring 2005. The topic is “Measurement Issues in Entrepreneurship” and the Guest Editors will be Drs. Jill Kickul and Sylvia Maxfield of the Simmons School of Management and Dr. Norris Krueger of TechConnect.

More information about this exciting Special Issue is available on the facing page. Note carefully the submission deadline of October 15, 2004.

As always, the Journal’s Editorial Staff welcomes your comments and reactions to our bi-annual effort to publish the best manuscripts we receive from our international audience. In this issue, we include articles concerning employee equity and incentive compensation issues; factors driving growth in international entrepreneurship; and microenterprise collaboration in third-sector communities. We also include two interviews with successful New England entrepreneurs, our second “Practitioner’s Corner” article, and a book review that revisits an intriguing owner’s perspective of how he managed his start-up company. Enjoy!
